Black Attacks Gold Seizure, Fearing Loss In Confidence

Federal Reserve Chief Challenges Policy of Roosevelt.

Congress Action Would Spike Fight

Byrns Seeks Passage of Revaluation Bill by Saturday.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As the House Democratic leaders prepared to dispose of the gold revaluation bill before the week ends, Governor Eugene R. Black of the Federal Reserve Board yesterday expressed to the Senate Banking and Currency Committee opposition to the Government taking title to the system's gold holdings.

Governor Black completed his testimony, started Wednesday, when he first informed the committee that the Reserve System had not approved President Roosevelt's scheme to seize the Federal Reserve gold. He explained yesterday the gold should remain as the base of the system's currency and credit operations.

Although Governor Black appeared again before a secret session of the committee, the prepared statement he read was made public. It was learned that in reply to a question he expressed fear the proposed seizure of gold would destroy public confidence in the Federal Reserve currency.

May Challenge President.

He called the committee's attention to the fact that the Reserve System gold at present "is pledged under the law" as security for $3,238,810,000 of Federal Reserve notes. He also revealed the Reserve System was ready to challenge the authority of the President if he undertook to seize its gold without Congressional action.

Before Gov. Black reappeared before the committee it was decided to throw open hearings on the bill, starting today. Some objection was expressed to make yesterday's hearing open on the ground that Gov. Black and the other Government officers present might not be as frank in their testimony as they would be in secret session.

No vote was taken on the question of holding open hearings. Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher (Democrat), of Florida, expressing the view that if members of the committee wanted public sessions he had no objection. Several witnesses, including Prof. George F. Warren, have been summoned for the session today.

2½ Billion Issue Proposed.

Just before the committee reconvened yesterday, Chairman Fletcher introduced in the Senat a Treasury amendment to the bill designed to facilitate the huge financing program confronting the Federal Government this year. This amendment, among other things, would increase by $2,500,000,000 the amount of Treasury notes which may be issued.

Meanwhile, the House leaders forced their Coinage Committee to report the revaluation bill at once

Theft Warrant Names Sinclair

Oil Magnate and 24 Others Face Embezzlement Charge on Bank.

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 18 (AP).—Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, and 24 others financially prominent in this oil capital, were charged today with embezzlement of $23,869.93 from the defunct Exchange Trust Co., of which they were officials.

The complaints were filed by J. M. Springer, special prosecutor appointed by Gov. William H. Murray, after an auditor examined the books of the firm which closed last spring. Warrants were issued for arrest of the accused.

The defendants, several of whom poured millions of dollars into the Exchange National Bank, the trust company, and affiliated concerns before the bank was reorganized with Federal aid last March, were alleged to have manipulated trust accounts.

Seven specific violations were cited, ranging in amount from $500 to $6,650.

Several of the men charged said they were putting the matter in the hands of attorneys and would issue statements at the "proper time." Sinclair was at Miami, Fla.

R. E. Adams, former chairman of the executive committee, termed the charges "ridiculous and absurd, instigated by political dislike."

Pinchot Signs Relief Bill.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, ill with shingles in a hospital, today signed the State old age assistance measure and a bill providing for permanent registration of voters in Pittsburgh.

A Bit of Wooing—40 Years Apart—But Cupid Wins

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—This thing called love got hold of Stanley Philips and Miss Cora Carsen many years ago—40, to be exact—but they were separated, not by a quarrel, but merely because they just happened to drift apart.

Tonight they are to be married. "I'm more in love now than I was in the beginning," Miss Carsen said, explaining that Mr. Philips had started looking for her again some 20 years ago.

Gold Measure "Right" Move, Warburg Says

Disapproves Seizure Step, But Praises Trend to Stability.

Qualified approval of President Roosevelt's gold devaluation bill as "a start in the right direction, away from uncertainty and toward a goal which will in time become definite," was voiced before the House Coinage Committee late yesterday by James P. Warburg, New York banker.

A devaluation of 40 per cent to 50 per cent "may work some injustice and may store up future trouble," Warburg warned, "but I bow to the judgment of the President."

The banker said he disapproved the Government's taking over the gold in the Federal Reserve Banks; that he favored the avowed intention to return to a fixed gold content, and that he disliked "currency legislation which does not, once and for all time, disavow greenback currency."

Warburg also suggested limiting the life of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund created by the President's bill to "the period when our currency is not tied to a fixed ratio of gold."

Somers Wins Bill.

Earlier in the day, the Coinage Committee, of which Andrew L. Somers (Democrat), New York, is chairman, obtained undisputed possession of the measure when Chairman Henry B. Steagall, of the Banking and Currency Committee, admitted defeat in the tug of war which enlivened the previous day's proceedings.

Chairman Somers' request for time for several days' hearings was refused by the House Rules Committee, however, and the bill will be taken up by the House Saturday.

Pressure from the White House led Democratic leaders to insist upon the President's measure coming up for debate—and certain passage—before the House adjourns for the week-end. The bill was favorably reported by the Coinage Committee yesterday.

Delay Cost Is High.

While requesting additional time for hearings, Chairman Somers stated to the Rules Committee that each day's delay in passing the bill is costing the United States $2,000,000, due to British manipulations in the foreign exchange market.

Warburg was the only witness to appear before the committee yesterday.

He began with a prepared statement, in which he took issue with the "Warren-Fisher" school of thought, "which says the breakdown of the monetary system lies at the root of the whole economic depression."

"A depression," the banker said, "is a complicated economic phenomenon, and recovery can not be sought by anything so simple as a change in the monetary system.

"The breakdown of the monetary system was in itself a result of the

Doctor's 2,400 Bills Fail To Return Stamp Cost

Bristol, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—A Bristol doctor yesterday said he mailed out 2,400 statements to patients at the first of the year, and the net return lacked $15 of being enough to pay the postage.

Kidnapped Storekeeper Is Freed by Bandits

Winchester, Ky., Jan. 18 (AP).—Thomas Swetnam, 43, kidnaped by four men who robbed his store at Flannagan Station last night, returned home today. He said the robbers released him near Lexington.

The four held up Swetnam's store and got two bags of silver, estimated at about $40, locked six customers and the driver of a taxicab in the store and fled in the cab, taking Swetnam.

CWA Given 15% Pay Cut, 24-Hr. Week

Dwindling Funds Leave Future Projects to Congress.

D. C. Weekly Pay Roll Due to Drop $50,000 on or Before March 1.

By Walton Onslow.

The Civil Works Administration program, one of the most vital elements in the Administration recovery plan, yesterday was cut down from two directions as its funds threatened to run out.

An Executive order of President Roosevelt, embraced in a ruling by Comptroller General McCarl, extended the 15 per cent pay cut to all Government workers paid from civil works funds whose positions correspond to those already cut.

Orders from Harry L. Hopkins, administrator, were sent to all CWA State directors cutting labor on the program to a four-day, 24-hour week, and civil works service employes to a 30-hour week.

The two orders will considerably restrict the program, lately the butt of an increasing amount of criticism from industry and farmers who held Government wages to be too high.

Purchases Restricted.

The action of Hopkins in cutting hours, which also included placing restrictions on purchase of new material and equipment, was precipitated by the discovery that funds of the Administration had run perilously low. The administrator deemed it necessary, if the program was to be continued to February 15, to take prompt economy measures and ordered hours cut.

Action of President Roosevelt to extend the 15 per cent pay cut to Civil Works workers in the Government was revealed in a ruling from the Comptroller General to the Secretary of Agriculture, in response to a request from him for a decision as to whether workers in his department paid from Civil Works funds should be subjected to the deduction.

However, McCarl's ruling fixed March 1 as the date by which the 15 per cent pay cut must be imposed, and officials were not prepared last night to say whether it would be put into effect by that time. If Congress extends the Civil Works program, as expected in many quarters, the deduction automatically will go into effect. Should the program stop by February 15, the deduction may not be put into effect.

Next Move Up to Congress.

Relief officials disclosed yesterday that all of the $900,000,000 allotted for direct relief and CWA probably will be exhausted by March 1. The Emergency Relief Administration originally was established with a $500,000,000 appropriation, which has been used for direct grants to States for relief and for the purchase of relief commodities. The sum of $400,000,000 later was allotted by the Public Works Administration for the Civil Works program.

The low condition of the Civil Works Administration treasury

Prison Preferred—He Wants to Box

Court Obliges With Term of Year and a Half.

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Frank ("Tiger") Ross, 24, got just what he wanted when arraigned for sentence in Monongalia Circuit Court for breaking into a wholesale house here, to which he pleaded guilty.

Ross said he preferred the State prison to a county jail, so he would have better opportunity to engage in his hobby of boxing.

The court accommodated him with a sentence of a year and a half in the State penitentiary. A jail sentence, under the law, would have meant a term of less than a year.

Trapped in Hotel Fire, Teacher Burns to Death

Harbor Grace, N. J., Jan. 18 (AP).—The Empire Hotel and several adjoining buildings were destroyed in a fire today which cost the life of Ida Parsons, a school teacher, trapped in the hotel.

The fire spread quickly to five other buildings, including one housing the telegraph office, and they were destroyed.

French Minister Awaits Duel With Bayonne Scandal Accuser

Paris, Jan. 18 (AP).—A noisy free-for-all battle of words broke out in the Chamber of Deputies today over the $40,000,000 Bayonne pawnshop scandal when Deputy Philippe Henriot threw the names of Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour and Anatole de Monzie, minister of education, into the fiery debate.

Henriot charged that Mme. Stavisky, widow of Serge Stavisky, the founder of the failed Bayonne institution, was arrested for robbery in 1926, and that M. Paul-Boncour and De Monzie visited her while she was under arrest.

Pandemonium followed the assertion. Deputies shouted and banged their desks, forcing President Bouisson to recess the chamber until the excitement had ended.

The foreign minister was in Geneva and De Monzie was absent.

De Monzie and Henriot threatened tonight to fight a duel.

They met in the chamber lobbies and almost came to blows. They exchanged witnesses who will decide whether the duel, which would be against the law, will be fought or whether the affair is to be settled otherwise.

Fake Money Irks Pirate Crew, So They Kidnap 9

Shanghai, Jan. 18 (AP).—The steamship Pooan, looted by pirates near Tsingtao, arrived here today ten passengers short—one dead of fright and the other nine were held for ransom.

Fifteen pirates were aboard as passengers. They saw several trunkloads of Chinese funeral imitation banknotes and mistook them for the real article.

Politician Lays His Mail Work To Civic Virtue

Sought to Aid City, Not a "Cut," G.O.P. Leader Tells Probers.

Politics and civic virtue played hide and seek yesterday when the Senate Air Mail Investigating Committee heard a series of conflicting stories about a politician's reputed offer to help an air line operator secure a Government mail contract for a 5 per cent cut.

William B. Robertson, the original Lindbergh backer and formerly an independent air line operator out of St. Louis, supplied the charges of politics. Willie Sacks, the St. Louis Republican leader accused of proffering his influence with the Postoffice Department for a consideration, supplied the civic virtue.

During the morning session Sacks, almost vehemently modest, said that Robertson asked him to represent his claims before the Postoffice Department because of Sacks' eminent success with other Postoffice matters.

Denies Asking Cut.

He denied he suggested the 5 per cent commission or proposed that Robertson contribute to the campaign fund of former Representative J. C. Dyer, of Missouri.

Robertson on the stand reiterated his charge about the 5 per cent and the suggested campaign contribution, and in addition quoted Sacks' further attempt to sell his services.

"Because of my connection with the Postoffice Department I know how to handle it."

Sacks, recalled to the stand, stuck to his denial of the proposed commission, but amended the campaign contribution denial with the words, "to the best of my recollection."

Sacks, who called himself one of the "prominent public men" of St Louis, began his testimony by admitting that he had at one time been indicted and convicted on a charge of using the mails to defraud, although he said the court of appeals had acquitted him.

He had met former Postmaster General Brown, Harry Sinclair and Jake Hammond, oil men, among many other prominent figures in the "same casual way that I have known so many public men."

Plea for Civic Virtue.

He testified that he first met Robertson at a luncheon in St. Louis, when the politician made an impassioned plea for civic virtue and the continuance of an airport in St. Louis.

"I wouldn't have you think that I alone was responsible for keeping the airport in St. Louis," he protested.

Some months later Robertson

Gang Offered $200,000 to Free Banker

E. C. Bremer, Once D. C. Student, Kidnaped in St. Paul.

Defying Federal Drive, Thugs Hit Friends of Keenan, Roosevelt.

St. Paul, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Edward C. Bremer, 36-year-old bank president and son of a millionaire St. Paul brewer, today was in the hands of kidnapers as relatives and friends sought to obtain his freedom by a payment of $200,000 ransom.

The ransom money has been raised, the United Press learned, and Bremer's friends were only awaiting word from the abductors.

Bremer received a master's degree at George Washington University in 1919.

The abductors, who seized the bank president yesterday morning as he was motoring to work, are depending on classified advertisements in local newspapers to communicate with their victim's family and friends.

Demand Money in Small Bills.

Bremer's father, Adolph Bremer, is a friend of President Roosevelt. The fact that his son had been kidnaped first became known at 11 a. m. yesterday when an unidentified person telephoned Walter McGee, a contractor and friend of the abducted man.

"We've got your pal, Ed Bremer," the caller told Magee. "Don't get excited. Go to the back room of your office. You'll find further instructions there. Ed's automobile is out at Dale street reservoir."

Rushing into his back office, Magee found that a note had been left there for him. It instructed him to get $200,000 and wait. The money, it was stated must be in bills of small denomination, and not bearing consecutive serial numbers.

Note Threatens Death.

The note threatened death if the money was not paid.

Magee at once informed the Bremer family.

Bremer's automobile, in which he had driven his only child, Betty, 9, to school yesterday morning, was found in the designated spot.

The note further instructed Magee to insert an advertisement in the Minneapolis Tribune. Today this ad appeared:

"We are ready Alice."

Bremer's family are close friends of the Hamm family. William Hamm, jr., a brewer, reported to have paid $100,000 ransom when kidnaped about a year ago. Four Touhy gangsters were acquitted recently on charges of kidnaping him. One committed suicide, and the other three are now on trial in Chicago, charged with kidnaping John Factor.

Police Blame St. Paul Gang.

Since the Hamm abduction unusual police measures have been taken here, and wealthy families have been instructed how to act in such an emergency.

When reports of Bremer's abduction first got out, local newspapers were asked to suppress the news until after 12:30 p. m. today, in order not to interfere with possible negotiations.

Farley May Quit Party Post After Elections; Shakeup to Continue

Wants Cabinet Job Only

Friends Believe General Is Exempt

Postal Chief Desires to Devote Full Time to Department.

By Raymond Clapper.

Friends of Postmaster General James A. Farley were confident last night that although he will not be affected by reorganization of the Democratic National committee now going on, a change in his status might be expected after the Congressional elections next fall.

In addition to his Cabinet office, Farley also is chairman of the Democratic National committee and of the New York State Democratic committee and bears the full brunt of patronage troubles in Washington.

Intimate friends of the genial Cabinet officer know that he realizes that he is attempting to perform too many duties. They also know that there are conditions involved which are beyond the control of Mr. Farley which will not permit him to act as he would like. But they are satisfied that in his own good time he will make whatever moves he believes advisable to relieve him of some of his responsibilities.

Has Eye on Record.

Those in Mr. Farley's confidence understand that his one desire is to be free to conduct the Postoffice Department in a way that will leave a record as Postmaster General which will merit the approval of the country and justify the confidence the President has reposed in him.

In the meantime, suggestions that he should step aside now as Democratic National chairman as part of the reorganization decreed by President Roosevelt will go unheeded. Mr. Farley refused to comment on them despite persistent questioning yesterday.

He is, however, going ahead with determination to complete the shake-up of the committee which President Roosevelt ordered in the hope that he could stop the practice of Democratic National committeemen representing clients in Washington in a way that might imply backdoor influence at the White House.

Other resignations were expected to follow that of Robert Jackson, of New Hampshire, who announced his retirement as secretary of the National committee and as committeeman from his State within a few hours after the White House ex-

District Rum Bill Forbids Sunday Sales

House and Senate Agree on Plan Despite Warm Protests.

Sale of liquor on Sunday is forbidden under provisions of a District liquor control bill agreed to unanimously yesterday by House and Senate conferees.

Permission to sell drinks during certain hours on Sunday had been sought by hotels and restaurants and the Chamber of Commerce. Spokesmen argued Sunday closing would cause hundreds of Washingtonians to go outside the city for their Sunday meals and bootleggers would thrive on the Sunday business within the city.

Senate conferees, however, were adamant and the House representatives yielded after proposals to permit sales after 1 o'clock or later in the afternoon had been voted down. The Senate amendment forbidding sale of liquor on Christmas Day, however, was stricken out.

Under the Sunday closing provision, night clubs, hotels, restaurants and clubs must stop selling drinks at midnight Saturday. Under the law in effect preceding prohibition clubs were permitted to sell drinks until 1 a. m.

Agreement of the conferees was reached after both House and Senate had adjourned for the day. Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate conferees, and Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House group, will seek approval of the conference report today.

Rules provide that conference reports must be printed in the Congressional Record before they can be called up for action. The rules can be waived by unanimous consent. This will be sought.

The procedure will be for the

NRA to Call On Industry To Raise Pay

Shorter Week Also Aim of Public Conference, Says Johnson.

New York, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Shorter hours and higher wages will be demanded of industry by the Recovery Administration at a general public conference on all approved codes next month, Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson indicated tonight.

"We are going to insist on shorter hours," he told the National Retail Dry Goods Association in a speech in which he catigated senatorial critics and warned that any attempt to restore antitrust laws to full effect would wreck the NRA. He was less definite about the higher wages.

Confident of Recovery.

Gen. Johnson expressed confidence that recovery was well on its way. More vigorously than ever before he called upon the public to patronize only stores showing the Blue Eagle, to wear only clothes with Blue Eagle labels, and to refuse to deal with noncompliers.

He warned storekeepers against increasing prices when not absolutely necessary.

"Keep prices down, for God's sake keep prices down. That and that alone is the royal road to recovery."

Johnson did not mention by name Senators Borah (Republican), of Idaho, and Nye (Republican, of North Dakota, both of whom made speeches in the Senate today demanding protection for the "little fellow" in business through restoration of at least part of the effect of the antitrust laws.

But he left no possible doubt that he was referring to them, and he

Byrd Finds His 'Home' Intact Amid Icy Wastes of Antarctic

Little America, Antartica, Jan. 18 (AP).—(Via Mackay Radio)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd returned to hi "home" in these frozen wastes with members of his second Antarctic expedition today, and found "it's all there."

After an absence of about four years, the commander and his men happily surveyed the old base and prepared to dig in again, preliminary to further explorations.

"It's all there," Admiral Byrd shouted when a landing party found the three 60-foot wireless towers of the camp intact and the buildings covered with snow.

"The administration building you can see, the three ventilators sticking up and the chimney. There's the radio shack to the left. It's all there under the snow!"

The flagship lay within the glistening barrier walls of the Bay of Whales, scarcely two miles away, where it arrived yesterday morning.

Six dog teams with camping supplies were disembarked. Plans were to find a safe mooring alongside firm bay ice on the west side of the bay, and put the airplanes over the side, to be flown to the base.

The effects of a terrific upheaval of ice, which last week wrecked havoc with the plane of the Ellsworth Transantarctic Expedition, were everywhere in evidence.

From East Cape to West Cape, whose high sheer walls form the portals of the Bay of Whales, the bottle-necked entrance to the bay was blocked by great masses of broken ice, 2 miles deep and icebergs 50 feet high.

Fully 5 miles of solid ice had broken off since the Ellsworth expedition had entered the bay. It had changed so much that Admiral Byrd and members of the first expedition for a time failed to recognize the surroundings.

3 Convicts Die In Futile Break

Fleeing Arkansas Prison Farm, Trio Fall Under Fire of Guards.

Tucker Prinson Farm, Ark., Jan. 18 (AP).—An outbreak by some of the prison's most desperate criminals, said by officials to have been a part of a plotted wholesale delivery, was thwarted today by trusty guards, who killed three of the convicts, wounded two and prevetned two others from escaping.

As some 80 convicts were in the woods clearing timber, the two leaders of the break assaulted a guard with an ax. Five others broke ranks and ran.

Fighting off the two convicts, the assaulted guard seized his weapon and killed them both.

The other guards, meanwhile, opened fire on the escaping men, wounding three, one fatally.

Coroner D. C. Root questioned the trusty guards and exonerated them.

The three killed were Archie (Cue Ball) Jones, who figured in two previous breaks which resulted in seven deaths; Cornelius Lefevre, a bank robber, from Clark County, and Walter Phillips, serving a sentence from Cross County for grand larceny.

Wounded were Guy Kimes, serving seven years for robbery in Benton County and under a 25-year robbery sentence in Oklahoma, and Walker Robinson, serving a robbery sentence from Union County and an escaped convict from Louisiana.

France to Cut Duties On U. S. Fruit Imports

Paris, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—French importers of American fruit said they had received notification today that the government agreed to reduce import license taxes on United States apples and pears.

Importers said the decision should greatly benefit fruit growers, as it now will be possible to import the quota of 20,000 tons of apples and pears which France granted last month.

Full Navy Bill Wins Approval By President

Douglas Tells Vinson Plan Meets Program; 101 Ships Likely.

By Robert C. Albright.

A treaty Navy for the United States was definitely in sight last night as the Administration placed the stamp of approval on the Vinson bill, authorizing the President immediately to undertake construction of warcraft up to the limit of each treaty category.

In a letter to Representative Carl Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, Budget Director Douglas said the measure "is in accord with the financial program of the President and there is no objection to its enactment."

Chairman Vinson immediately called hearings on the bill for next week. House Democratic Leader Joseph W. Byrns said floor time will be made for the legislation at an early date if it meets with the President's wishes.

Hoped for Further Cuts.

"I hoped we could get another international agreement, further limiting armaments of the world powers, but if there's no chance of that I think we ought to build at once to treaty limits," Representative Byrns said.

Under provision of the bill, as soon as money is authorized by Congress the President could commence construction of one aircraft carrier, 99,200 tons of destroyers and 35,550 tons of submarines, about 101 ships altogether, i naddition to the cruisers, not yet constructed, but authorized by the act of February 13, 1929.

Representative Vinson said Japan already has provided for full naval strength permitted that nation by treaty, and Great Britain seems "practically certain to do so."

"By contrast, the United States Navy is dangerously deficient in modern ships and will remain so even after all of the vessels now building have been completed," he said.

Due to Lack of Policy.

"This is largely due to the lack of a definite naval policy in the past.

"In order to obtain the best design, the best workmanship, the least cost and the minimum disturbance to industry, the rate of shipbuilding must be steady. We can not afford to continue the old wasteful method of building a Navy by alternate spasms of intense activity and complete idleness."

Representative Byrns also said he favored building by "gradual" stages.

The Vinson bill is similar in many respects to the measure introduced last week by Representative Fred Britten (Republican), Illinois, authorizing a seven-year building program, at a total cost of $475,200,000.

Britten said his bill was based on "the highest expert authority in the American Navy" and was "not in conflict with the announced naval policy of the Roosevelt Administration."

Could Halt Building.

Both the Britten and Vinson measures would empower the President to suspend building operations in the event of further international agreement for the limitation of arms.

The Vinson bill provides that "the composition of the United States Navy with respect to the categories of vessels limited by the teraties signed at Washington February 6, 1922, and at London April 22, 1930, is hereby established at the limit prescribed by those treaties."

It would authorize the President to undertake before December 31, 1936, "or as soon thereafter as he may deem advisable," the Vinson construction program, in addition to the five cruisers not yet constructed under the 1929 act.

"The measure simply means that the United States Navy will be built up to treaty strength over a period of years and maintained at that level," Chairman Vinson said.

Dollfuss Gives Berlin Warning

Not Safe to Threaten His Country, He Says; Bombs Greet Duce Envoy.

Vienna, Jan. 18 (AP).—A warning to Germany that "it is not entirely safe" to threaten the "independence and freedom of Austria" was issued today by Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss in a speech marking the arrival of Undersecretary Fulvio Suvich of Italy for diplomatic discussions.

"Our great neighbor land must finally realize that it is perhaps not an entirely safe game when a country, whose importance in central Europe and, indeed, all Europe, is generally understood and recognized, continues to be constitutionally threatened in its independence and freedom by a great power—which, unfortunately, is also a country inhabited by brother-folk," the fighting 5-foot chancellor asserted.

The clattering of hoofs, the bursting of bombs and the shrieking of police sirens formed an exciting background to the discussions between the Chancellor and Premier Mussolini's emissary.

Nazis in this way let the Italian statesman know they have not yet been exterminated by Dollfuss' ruthless campaign against them, their propaganda and their "terrorism."

Police managed to keep a mob away from Suvich's hotel, but Hitlerites succeeded in turning off street lights. Police arrested 964.

Further Drop InEmployment Called Normal

Holiday Trade Reduced December Decline to 30,000 Persons.

A continued drop in employment and payrolls during December was announced yesterday by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, although her figures showed the net decline in jobs to be comparatively small.

A lengthy report from the Bureau of Labor Statistics showed the index of employment in fanufacturing industries to be 1.8 per cent under November figures, while payrolls dropped approximately $880,000 in weekly wages. The decline continued the falling-off started in November, but Miss Perkins asserted that the drop followed the normal course of the last ten years for the season.

Opposed to the decline in manufacturing industries were strong gains registered in employment for nonmanufacturing industries, such as retail stores, hotels and petroleum production. A 15 per cent increase in retail employment for Christmas trade and other gains brought the net drop down to 30,000 persons, although Miss Perkins said 113,000 lost jobs in the manufacturing groups.

District Shows Fair.

The District placed third in the list of States showing gains in employment for December, when it showed an increase of 6 per cent over the preceding month. A total of 619 establishments here showed 33,966 persons on pay rolls, which reached a weekly total of $735,983, a gain in pay roll of 3.9 per cent.

Heading the list was Michigan with an increase of 9.6 per cent, which Miss Perkins attributed to pick-up in automobile manufacturing. New Mexico showed an employment gain of 8.5 per cent, caused by expansion of bituminousg coal mining. Florida had a 5.3 per cent increase.

Miss Perkins reported employment in manufacturing industries in December approximated that of October, 1931, and that pay rolls stood at the February, 1932, level. The drop of 1.6 per cent in employment, she said, exceeded by 1 per cent the average of the last ten years.

Marked Rise in Pay Rolls.

The factory employment index shown by the report indicated a gain of 27.2 per cent over the March index, while pay rolls were 49.1 per cent better. Although manufacturing as a whole showed losses, certain industries in the group registered gains.

Among these were members of the transportation group which had a 14.4 increase, caused by pick-ups in automobile, electric and steam car building and shipbuilding industries. The most pronounced decline was shown in the tobacco group. Textiles and men's furnishings also showed drops.

Gains in the transportation group were partly caused by Public Works Administration loans to railroads, Miss Perkins said. She reported more than 260,000 persons were employed directly on public works construction with monthly pay rolls of $15,000,000. Materials valued at $13,000,000 were bought by contractors on Public Works Administration jobs during the month, she said.

Higher Pay, Short Week, Aim of NRA

accused them of refusing to attempt to cure the situation they complained of—the squeezing of the small dealer. Johnson recently offered to set up an NRA board with Borah and Nye as members to hear small business complaints, but they said they felt such a board should not have Senators on it.

The general did not go into detail in plans for raising wages and spreading work, but he said that would be a goal of the February conference. He has indicated before that a 32-hour week might be sought.

"Generally speaking, the dead cats are fewer in number and have lost some of their ripeness and velocity," he said, "but a storm is brewing. I refer to the claim that the NRA oppresses the 'little fellow' and promotes monopoly."

"Oppression to Chislers."

The NRA does oppress some persons, he conceded—"people who are not willing to accord decent wages and proper hours to human labor."

The employer of 5 to 30 persons is the greatest NRA chisler, Johnson charged, and asked whether such an employer is more oppressed by slightly higher business costs than his employes would be at lower wages.

"Generally speaking, there has been nothing but benefits from the codes to small enterprises," he said.

Success Up to Workers.

"I yield to no man in my admiration for the Federal Trade Commission," he went on, but said that moving it into control, as has been suggested, would kill the recovery program."

The recovery law is "entirely in your hands," he told his audience. "If you ignore the Blue Eagle, so will your employers ignore it. * * * As the Angel of Death, at the passover, omitted those houses that showed no crimson palm mark on the linel, so do you pass by any shop window or advertisement that does not display the eagle."

Agriculture is improving and the President's new monetary program provides for missing links in recovery, he said, and added:

"Business is on its way."

Gravelly Point Rirport Urged by Trade Body

Creation of an airport at Gravelly Point rather than enlargement of the present one was urged by the Washington Board of Trade yesterday in a letter to Representative John J. McSwain, chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs.

Facilities for seaplanes and land planes at Gravelly Point would be unlimited, the letter stated, both in respect to approach and the size and provision for accommodation. This opinion is shared by outstanding aviation authorities from Lindbergh down, Representative McSwain was told.

Britain Asked to Sterilize 250,000 Mental Defectives

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—To remove "the dead weight of social inefficiency and individual misery entailed by the existence of more than 300,000 mental defectives" the legalization of voluntary sterilization was recommended tonight by a government committee.

The recommendation, in the form of a bill for a law, was made in a report of a committee which the Ministry of Health appointed last year to study the problem.

It suggests that mentally defective and some physically ailing persons shown to be carriers of transmissable disabilities be deprived of reproductive powers only under written authorization of the health minister.

American experience showed the lack of wisdom in compulsory sterilization, C. P. Blacker, secretary of the eugenics society, said, and for this reason the committee decided against forced measures.

Coercive measures adopted by the Nazi regime in Germany, which went into effect January 1, and involved an estimated 400,000 persons suffering nine classes of defects or diseases, were held by members of the eugenics society to have no scientific justification.

Bill "Right" Move, Warburg Asserts

depression and not its primary cause."

Warburg said he could not see the desirability of a dollar of variable gold content.

Presupposes Too Much.

"Apart from the theoretical merits or demerits of the Fisher-Warren commodity dollar idea, I do not believe in its practical value, because it presupposes that the same human beings who failed to manage the comparatively simple mechanism of the gold standard, will be able successfully to manage a very much more complicated mechanism.

"No one knows better than this committee what happens to a highly technical and precise proposal when it is put through the Congressional machinery and becomes legislation."

The banker said he believed President Roosevelt had changed from his championing of a dollar of variable gold content to a modernized gold standard, "a purpose with which I am in thorough sympathy."

As for the stabilization fund, Warburg said he advocated it last March, and that "I have always felt that any profit from devaluation should go to the Government."

Thought 30 Per Cent Enough.

Pointing to his own warning that "the entire recovery program is jeopardized by uncertainty and doubt in the monetary field," Warburg said he had advocated devaluation before President Roosevelt did, but that he thought a 30 per cent devaluation sufficient.

"I am thoroughly convinced that if you will analyze the experience of the past—if you will build upon that experience a monetary mechanism to carry out the President's high purpose—rather than starting out upon an entirely new conception of what money is, what money means, and what money can reasonably be expected to do, you will perform a service for which future generations will thank you," he concluded.

Questioned by members of the committee, Warburg sparred deftly with the demand of Representative Feisinger (Democrat), Ohio:

"What would you do if you were a Congressman and had to vote on the bill?"

Would Back President.

"I would make a speech," said the banker, with unconscious humor, saying I would support any bill the President might recommend at this time, but that it would be better, in my opinion, not to have the range of devaluation as low as 60 per cent. I would be for the bill because the President has more facts than I possess, but if I were its author, it would be different.

"The range is too low, and it will require force to keep it down. I would fix a bottom, and leave the top open. I would kill any possibility of us ever having greenbacks, and then proceed by joint operation with other nations to find the natural point of equilibrium."

Warburg said he understood this was to be but the first of "several steps" the President has in mind.

He favored limiting the holding of monetary gold to central banks, which would use it only for stabilization and settlement of international balances, and as backing for their currency.

Approves Profit Taking.

"I approve the Government taking the profits of devaluation, but not taking over the gold in Federal Reserve banks," he said. "If the banks hold their gold and the Government revalues it, it will be possible for them to turn over their book profits."

The main problem, Warburg said, is that of financing an enormous Government expenditure program. If it is nonrecurring, it will be possible to balance the budget.

"Then, an equalization fund is necessary, provided its life is limited to the period when currency is not tied to a fixed ratio of gold.

"You are merely arming the President against similar funds in the hands of other governments.

"Whether we can accomplish our purpose depends upon whether we can sell a huge amount of Government bonds now, and later retire them; and whether we can sell Government bonds now depends in large measure on the removal of uncertainty in regard to our currency.

"Two elements of doubt make disposition of the bonds difficult; (a) the fear that we might start printing 'Thomas amendment notes,' and (b) as to whether we are going back to a fixed ratio of gold, or are to have a dollar of variable content.

Bill Reported Early.

Chairman Somers had the gold bill, H. R. 6976, reported to the House the first thing in the morning.

Majority Leader Byrns asked unanimous consent to have it made an order of business, but Representative Louis T. McFadden (Republican), Pennsylvania, objected.

Minority Leader Snell maintained the committee on coinage, weights and measures had not had sufficient time to consider the bill.

"Well, the committee has reported the bill," replied Byrns. "And the Secretary of the Treasury says it is of the utmost importance that it be considered immediately. "I am informed that the President also feels that way

"It is unheard of, to stop to consider a bill after it has been reported to the House. There won't be any changes made in the bill in committee, anyhow," Byrns said.

"I think there might be a few changes," volunteered McGuigan.

There was a good deal of scurrying around after Democratic members of the rules committee. The four Republican members were on hand, and when Representative Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, finally called the committee to order, in the absence of Chairman Pou, the count stood 4 to 4.

Chairman Somers then was heard. He asked for a rule bringing up the bill "not before Monday," with six hours of general debate.

Ask Testimony by 12.

"I was requested by Republican members of the committee to invite 12 men to testify," said Somers. "That's the principal reason."

The 12 men, he said, were Newton D. Baker, Owen D. Young, Prof. Parker Willis, of Columbia University; George Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank; Randolph Burgess, deputy governor; Prof. John Williams, formerly of Harvard University and now with the New York Federal Reserve; George Norris, governor of the Philadelphia Reserve Bank; Roy Young, governor of the Boston Federal Reserve; Dr. Goldenweiser, economist of the Federal Reserve Board; Leonard Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co.; Prof. James Angell, of Columbia University; Prof. Kemmerer, of Princeton; Dr. Benjamin Anderson, economist of the Chase National Bank; Winthrop Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National; David Huston, former Secretary of the Treasury, now president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., and Walter Stewart, of Case, Pomeroy & Co., former economist of the Bank of England, and formerly with the Federal Reserve Board.

and then got the Rules Committee to report out a rule giving the bill privileged status, with general debate, starting Saturday, limited to four hours. On expiration of that time each speaker will be limited to five minutes on each amendment.

Democratic Floor Leader Joseph W. Byrns intends to keep the House in session Saturday until the bill is passed. He brought pressure on the Coinage Committee to report the bill at once. The committee wished to hold it until Monday so hearings could be held.

White House Wants Action.

Inspired by suggestions from the White House, it is understood, Mr. Byrns said it was 'perfectly ridiculous to hold up this bill for hearings," adding the committee could hold its hearings next month but that the President needed the measure to combat the operations of "the $2,000,000,000 English stabilization fund."

A strengthening of the dollar in relation to pound sterling exchange overnight appeared to have caused the sudden desire to have the legislation passed promptly. Commenting on the strengthening of the dollar from $5.09 to $4.97, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau asserted that "if we had the fund at this time it would be very useful."

The Coinage Committee finally acceded to the floor leader's demands and reported the bill, deciding, however, to hold hearings on it and file a supplemental report later. The first witness after this decision was James P. Warburg, former monetary adviser to President Roosevelt. In general he approved the measure, disagreeing with some of its provisions.

In reporting the bill the House committee attached to it an amendment requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to report to Congress regarding the operation of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund. This change was acceptable to the Administration since, as the measure originally was drawn, it clothed the fund's activities with secrecy unless the President or Secretary of the Treasury wished to make them known.

Fund Held a Protection.

The Coinage Committee in its report contended that Great Britain's operation of her equalization fund "was so effective in driving our dollar up that we were forced off the gold standard" and that "it is to prevent a repetition of this experience that we create the stabilization fund preparatory to the return to gold redemption."

The proposed stabilization fund was characterized "the most ingenious instrument ever developed in the monetary system," being "equally effective in attack and defense." The fund was being set up, the committee stated "to defend the American dollar and our gold stocks against the invasion of a similar fund operated by competitor nations."

The haste in the House was lacking in the Senate, where it is doubtful whether the bill will be ready for debate before the middle of next week. In the meantime some provisions of the bill, especially that creating the stabilization fund, may be changed in the committee, where the voting will be close. But such changes may be overruled when the bill reaches the Senate floor. The Senate will approve the measure by an overwhelming margin.

Senate Moves Slowly.

The Senate Committee's consideration of the bill will be slow. The session yesterday was consumed by the testimony of Gov. Black and that of Adolph C. Miller, a member of the reserve board. The latter upheld the views expressed by Gov. Black, it was said.

Briefly, Gov. Black's attitude was that the reserve system was willing to surrender to the Government any so-called profits or enhanced value in its gold holdings resulting from dollar devaluation but that allocation of this profit in no way involved the necessity for a change of title to that gold.

He pointed out the profits could be allocated to the Government in any form meeting the Government's requirements, leaving the gold, however, in the possession of the reserve system. The revaluation bill, however transfers title of all the reserve system gold to the Treasury.

Gov. Black revealed that in December that Secretary Morgenthau made an effort to commandeer the reserve system gold, acting under a section of the reserve act. He described how the officers of the system resisted this attempt and told of their determination to bring court action if Secretary Morgenthau had gone ahead with his plan.

Attached to Gov. Black's statement was a tabulation showing distribution of the Reserve Systems gold. It showed gold in the Treasury and Federal Reserve Banks total $4,012,918,000. Government agencies now have physical possession of $3,201,941,000, while the Federal Reserve Banks hold $810,977,000 of gold coin and bullion. In addition, these banks hold $942,796,000 in gold certificates. Of the gold in physical possession of Treasury agencies, $2,762,259,000 is owned now by the Reserve banks. The Treasury holds the gold as collateral for currency and in the gold settlement and redemption funds.

Thus, the total gold reserves of the 12 Reserve banks is $3,573,236,000, while gold in the Treasury other than Reserve System holdings is $439,682,000, according to Gov. Black's statement.

The amendment to the bill designed to facilitate financing operations in text was of a technical nature. It amended the second Liberty Loan act at a number of points. Secretary Morgenthau, in a letter to the Senate committee, told what would be accomplished by the amendment.

Would Allow Private Sales.

According to his analysis, the Treasury would be able to sell its securities privately, to an insurance company, for instance, instead of being compelled to make a public offering. In addition to extending the amount of Treasury notes which may be issued from $7,500,000,000 to $10,000,000,000, the amendment would authorize the issuance of any type of obligation with a maturity not beyond one year on a discount basis. At present only Treasury bills may be sold on a discount basis.

The amendment also would make it possible for the Treasury to buy any of its obligations with the proceeds of any other type. At present Treasury notes can be purchased only with the proceeds of notes; certificates and bills with the proceeds of certificates and bills. The change will facilitate the $4,000,000,000 refunding operation which the Government must carry out by July 1, Secretary Morgenthau explained.

It is also provided in the amendment that bonds or notes issued for purposes other than refunding may be purchased for the sinking fund and that gold certificates may be issued against any gold in the Treasury except the gold reserves. At present, gold certificates may be issued against gold only to private persons depositing gold, except for the payment of interest on the public debt.

Tired of Oratory, Judge Orders Lawmakers Held

Cincinnati, Jan. 18 (AP).—Asserting he was weary of "political speeches for the benefit of constituents," Judge Alfred Mack today ordered forfeited the $1,500 bond of John T. Murphy, Kentucky State Senator, accused of forgery, and issued a warrant for his arrest.

Joint Liquor Hearings Open At Richmond

Dispensaries Championed as Means to Defeat Bootlegging.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 18.—Bootlegging can be eliminated only through adoption of a dispensary liquor plan, House and Senate Finance Committees were told today.

The joint liquor hearings, which are expected to last several days, began after legislative sessions marked by introduction of bills intended to distribute whisky profits among political subdivisions and reduce automobile license fees.

Principal champions of the dispensary system appearing before the finance committees were Senator John W. Eggleston and former Senator James Barron, Norfolk member of the Virginia Liquor Control Commission.

Wickham Only Opponent.

Senator Henry T. Wickham, Ashland, author of a measure proposing a private license plan, was the only opponent of dispensaries questioned.

Several hundred persons, the largest crowd attracted by an assembly committee hearing in many years, packed the floor and galleries of the House chamber. Spectators remained silent while advantages of State-operated stores were extolled, but frequently cheered Wickham.

Claims that dispensaries would take the profit out of bootlegging were the outstanding arguments of the liquor commission members, while Wickham centered his comment around the contention that the dispensary bill was invalid under both the State and Federal constitutions.

Hotel Sales Opposed.

Proposals to permit whisky sales in hotels and restaurants drew commission disapproval by a 14-to-1 vote, Eggleston declared.

"The commission felt," he explained, "such a provision would make every restaurant and hotel a barroom."

Eggleston contended the dispensary plan removed all incentive for private profit. He added the commission favored unrestricted removal of whisky from wet to dry counties as a means of preventing bootlegging in the latter areas.

Establishment of an alcoholic beverage control board, he testified, would enable the State to receive all profits possible from whisky traffic. He said distribution of liquor earnings between the State and political subdivisions was not considered within the province of the commission.

"My personal view," he explained, "is that all the localities should share in the profits. I don't care whether they're wet or dry."

Manufacture Opposed.

Suggested manufacture of liquor by the State was opposed by the commission, Eggleston said, due to the expense involved and because large investments would make it difficult for the State to withdraw from the business in case public sentiment changed.

Wickham criticized provisions of the dispensary bill under which the control board would be authorized to draft different regulations for separate counties. He objected to another clause permitting the board to revoke wine and beer licenses at will without hearings and without provision for appeal.

"Any lawyer knows the bill is unconstitutional," he charged.

Wickham Cites Benefits.

Counties and cities, Wickham declared, would obtain much needed revenue by sale of liquor licenses under his bill. He said the State would benefit, too, by imposition of a 50-cent gallonage tax.

"If the State attempts to open dispensaries," he argued, "the men who run them will have great opportunity to steal. That bill will just breed corruption."

Barron said the dispensary plan would involve no expense except the liquor purchase price and payment of Federal taxes.

"What about the license plan?" he asked. "That would mean five burdens—the cost of the liquor, the Federal tax, local taxes, State taxes and profit to the dealer."

As proof of his contention that the dispensary system was advisable, Barron said all bootleggers favored the license plan. He conceded the dispensary bill should be amended to provide privilege of appeal to the courts.

Revenue Estimates.

Senator W. Worth Smith, Louisa, earlier introduced in the Senate a bill under which all profits from operation of the dispensary system would be divided among political subdivisions on the basis of average public school attendance.

Estimated annual revenue for the localities under such a measure would include: Albemarle County, $16,560; Arlington County, $14,814; Augusta County, $21,561; Clarke County, $3,504; Culpeper County, $8,127; Fairfax County, $13,995; Fauquier County, $10,488; Loudoun County, $10,704; Prince William County, $8,829; Spotsylvania County, $6,252; Alexandria, $12,888; Charlottesville, $10,281, and Fredericksburg, $3,849.

Richmond, Jan. 18 (AP).—Gov. Peery said that he has received "a great number" of applications for the positions on the proposed State liquor control board of three men, for which more than a dozen names are being mentioned as possibilities.

Among those whose names have been heard in this connection are Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, a member of the commission which drew up the proposed plan; Senator W. Worth Smith, unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor; Albert O. Boschen, Richmond member of the House and foe of prohibition; Delegate J. W. Witten, of Tazewell; Assistant Attorney General Edwin H. Gibson and John E. Rose, jr., former commissioner of revenue for Richmond.

Former Senator R. H. Langhorne, of Campbell County, is an active candidate for the appointment.

Randolph Whittle, Roanoke lawyer and a son of the late Justice Stafford G. Whittle of the Supreme Court of Appeals, has been indorsed for the board, as has M. S. Battle, another Roanoke man.

Others mentioned are James C. Martin, Roanoke attorney; O. L. Stearnes, of Salem, former member of the House; V. R. Cate, of Emporia, and Wade Miles, of Bristol.

Automobile licenses would be cut from 70 to 35 cents per 100 pounds under a bill offered by Delegate I. N. Coleman Dinwiddie. Another measure embodying the plan of Gov. Peery for flat rates beginning at $10 for cars under 3,000 pounds probably will be advanced soon.

Senators William Tuck, Halifax, and John Wycker, Richmond, introduced a bill to prevent closed State banks from making general assignments for the benefit of creditors.

Senator John W. Rust, Fairfax, sponsored a proposal to authorize sale of resident hunting and fishing licenses to nonresidents owning property in Virginia.

Hotel Sales Ban Urged.

By Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Jan. 18.—Legislative authority for hotels to serve liquor would result in a State-wide dry law within five years, Delegate W. Stuart Moffett, Staunton, declared in an interview today.

Moffett announced he would use his influence with the House finance committee, of which he is a veteran member, to win a favorable report for a majority liquor bill restricting whisky sales to State-operated dispensaries.

Sales of liquor in hotels, he said, would convert dining rooms into virtual barrooms and bring sharp reaction in public sentiment.

The Staunton delegate also voiced opposition to proposals that localities share in liquor revenue with the State.

Mellon Tax Qui Ruling Pledged By Cummings

Case Being Taken Up With Treasury Department for Decision.

(United Press.)

Attorney Generatl Cummings said yesterday that the Department of Justice investigation into income tax returns of former Secretary of Treasury Andrew Mellon wats continuing and that the case was being taken up with the Treasury Department.

"There is no conflict or misunderstanding between the two departments," Cummings said. "We do not parallel work, but, on the contrary, work in the closest spirit of cooperation.

"Under existing arrangements, the Department of Justice ordinarily does not conduct income tax investigations. These matters lie within the jurisdiction of the Treasury Department.

"When the Treasury investigations disclose a situation which the department thinks should be drawn to the attention of the Department of Justice, a report to that effect is transmitted to the Deparmen of Jusice, which then determines what course of action it should pursue.

"The Mellon case had, however, a slightly different history. A suit was brought in the District of Columbia by one Olson, making certain charges against former Secretary Mellon and other defendants. This suit was a matter of public record. As I recall it, Senator Wagner introduced in the Senate a resolution asking the Department of Justice to investigate. At or about the same time requests came from one or more members of Congress to investigate certain claims made with reference to the personal income tax returns of Mr. Mellon.

"Under these circumstances the Department of Justice, with a full knowledge and approval of the Treasury Department, has been conducting an investigation. The Treasury Department has been desirous of bringing these matters to a conclusion with a view to sending certain notices to former Secretary Mellon. This action has, however, been delayed until the Department of Justice could have an opportunity to complete its investigation and confer with the Treasury Department."

The discoverer, Jacobus Jonkher, plans to return to farming on a large scale—but first he will buy a silk hat and a frock coat, he said.

Way Ahead

Coughlin Meets Roosevelt in Hour's Talk.

Detroit's magnetic "radio priest"—Father Charles E. Coughlin—yesterday declared after an hour's talk with President Roosevelt that the Nation's Chief Executive is "20 years ahead" of the thought of today.

It was obvious the young priest, who told the House Coinage Committee Tuesday it was either "Roosevelt or ruin," was more convinced than ever after the interview.

"We discussed some sociological problems," he told newsmen as he left the White House. "I discovered that Mr. Roosevelt is about 20 years ahead of the thought that is current today.

President Is Told About Slum Plans

N. Y. Clearance Project Explained by Official.

Plans for slum clearance in New York City, for which $25,000,000 has been allocated by the Public Works Administration, were explained to President Roosevelt yesterday by Langdon W. Post, New York's tenement houst commissioner.

Some idea of the possibilities of providing low-cost housing in America's greatest city was revealed in Mr. Post's jesting statement: "We only need about a billion and a half for the worst parts of New York."

An authority to which the money would be allocated is provided in legislation now pending before the State Legislature. Mr. Post said surveys have been made of twelve areas, embodying about 1,200 blocks, in which old structures would be replaced by low-cost buildings.

District Liquor Bill Forbids Sunday Sales

House and Senate Agree on Plan Despite Warm Protests.

Senate to act on the conference report and formally inform the House of its action. The House then will act. The bill will then be enrolled on parchment at the Government Printing Office and returned to House and Senate for signatures of the Vice President and the Speaker.

Unless special permission is given signatures must be attached while the presiding officers are sitting in their chairs while the two Houses are in session. If no hitch occurs the bill can be sent to the President for signature tomorrow. If some hitch occurs it will not get to him until next week, inasmuch as the Senate will not be in session tomorrow.

Most of the Senate amendments were accepted by the House conferees, although they gained one concession regarded as important by many House members. The Senate receded from its provision fixing at 50 the minimum number of rooms which must be available for transients to permit issuance of a license to a hotel. The House minimum of 30 rooms was agreed on.

Drinking in public streets, highways and parks and other public places is forbidden. This prohibition, recommended by the Commissioners, and the House District Committee was stricken out on the House floor. The Senate put it back and the conferees approved it.

Licenses Restricted.

Licenses to sell may not be issued to persons convicted of misdemeanors under the repealed Volstead law within five years of enactment of the law. Licenses may not be issued to persons convicted of a felony within ten years.

Efforts to wipe the Volstead law completely off the legislative map met with complete failure. Even Senator Reynolds, who is the most liberal of the Senate conferees, voted down that proposal and the five years limitation was the most which could be won, despite pleas that the Senate amendment would bar persons convicted of possession of as much as a pint of gin.

A new definition of wine was written into the bill at the insistence of the House members. Under it nothing but wines made from grapes may be labeled "wine." Other wines must be labeled as "elderberry wine," "rice wine," "cherry wine," or whatever else the wine is made of. House members from the grape-growing areas were anxious about the wine definition.

Representative Norton refused to take advantage of the gallantry of the Senators and withdrew her plea for restoration of the provision making mandatory appointment of at least one woman to the alcoholic beverage control board of three.

Woman to Get Post.

But before she withdrew her proposal she received the assurance of Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, that he would join her in requesting the District Commissioners to name a woman to the control board. On top of that the Commissioners gave an unofficial promise they would name a woman to the board.

Repeal of the Federal law forbidding sale or possession of liquor to Army and Navy personnel in uniform or on naval or military reservations was stricken out. The repeal was inserted in the Senate. The conferees' action leaves the law as it has been. It is planned later to introduce a separate measure on the subject.

The Commissioners may limit the number of licenses of any class which may be issued in the District as a whole or in any particular neighborhood under another Senate amendment agreed to by the conference. The House took the authority out of the bill. The Senate put it back.

Zones may be established around churches, schools and colleges within which liquor may not be sold, but the limitation was made to apply only to businesses established after the date of enactment of the law. The House fixed April 5, 1933, as the date.

No liquor may be sold on credit at retail for off-premise consumption except by druggists on prescription. Hotels and clubs may sell by the drink on credit to registered guests and to members and their guests. No other retail sales may be made on credit except sales of light wines and beer. Light wines are described as those having less than 14 per cent alcohol.

Off Sale for Grocers.

Chain grocery, drug or other stores may be issued only one off-sale license for one store. This was designed to prevent domination of the business by any one interest. Corporations owning more than one hotel, however, many get more than one on-sale license.

The license and tax fees and the classification of licenses were left as passed by the Senate.

The Commissioners' authority to remove members of the control board at will was retained.

The bill also carried the provision that owners of 51 per cent of the property within 600 feet of an establishment for which a license is sought may forbid issuance of a license.

Two weeks' public notice must be given of each application for a license and protestants must be given a hearing by the control board. The board may refuse licenses for other reasons.

Light wines and beer are placed in one class and fortified or stronger wines and whisky and other alcoholic beverages in another. The major restrictions are placed on the stronger beverages. The light wines and beer are put under little restriction.

France to Scrap Reich Trade Pact

Acts to Enable Reprisals in Tari: War.

Paris, Jan. 18 (AP).—France today denounced its trade treaty with Germany to enable reprisals in the tariff war between the two countries, already at loggerheads over Chancellor Hitler's armament demands.

Formal notification that the commercail treaty of 1927 between the two countries will be scrapped was sent Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet for presentation to the German government in Berlin tomorrow.

The note merely notifies that the treaty has been denounced, but M. Francois-Poncet was expected to convey French hope that a new agreement may be reached within three months, when abandonment of the treaty is effective.

It was said that, although Mr. Rockefeller had almost recovered from the attack of grippe he suffered in November, his physicians have decided it would be unwise for his to take his annual Southern trip.

NINETY per cent of all hauling can be most economically handled by trucks of two ton capacity, or smaller. Ford V-8 trucks and commercial cars offer many outstanding advantages in this type of service. They have more working horse power per pound of chassis weight than any trucks of similar capacity. They are ruggedly built throughout—and the new low prices for 1934 make it more profitable than ever to replace a misfit truck with one designed to fit your needs.

There are three chassis and a wide variety of body types—each designed by Ford engineers specifically for the work expected of it. The Ford V-8 you select is ready to work the day you buy it, and it will give you a new standard of operating economy. Ask for a demonstration on your own job.

Cuba Welcomes Pro-American Mendieta Rule

New President Moves to Meet Crisis and Gain Recognition.

Havana, Jan. 18 (AP).—Carlos Mendieta became the President of Cuba today and was acclaimed by a joyous popular demonstration, in sharp contrast to the reception of his four predecessors in the last five months.

Delirious pandemonium broke loose as the 60-year-old revolutionary, physician and statesman entered the office which youthful Carlos Hevia left after serving two days, and took the inaugural oath.

To the accompaniment of cheering, shouting and widespread shooting, and with general rejoicing, the Nationalist leader swore he would try to lead Cuba back to normalcy.

Seven revolutionary factions ratified his appointment at 10 a. m.

Sends Greetings to U. S.

In the midst of the demonstration the veteran leader, who accepted the provisional presidency only when his advisers convinced him he was the only man equipped to face the crisis, paused to send his greetings to the United States through the Associated Press.

"I send the American people my government's and my own most cordial and affectionate greeting, hoping that Cuba may base herself on an order of reason and justice," he said.

The statement was considered particularly significant in view of a widespread prediction that Mendieta would achieve the recognition of the United States and other nations.

Hevia suddenly resigned last night in the face of threats of a general strike, a walkout of government employes, and the move of Col. Fulgencio Batista, commander of the army, to combat "radicalism" by designating army officers for temporary cabinet positions.

Sterling, Envoy to U. S.

Sterling was appointed Ambassasador to Washington this afternoon. At that time hundreds of Cubans gathered at the American Embassy shouting, "Viva Roosevelt! Viva Caffery! Viva the United States!"

A statement by Caffery said:

"I have confidence in the patriotism of the republic's leaders and confidence that their principal interests will be the service of their compatriots and that their efforts will be directed especially toward the lot of her people on the plantations, in the factories, and in their homes."

$200,000 Offered Banker Kidnapers

Inspector Tierney, the diminutive head of the city's "anti-kidnap squad," believes the kidnaping to be the work of a St. Paul gang.

Victim Well Known Here.

Edward C. Bremer, abducted in St. Paul, is an alumnus of both Catholic and George Washington Universities of this city.

Justice Department officials yesterday awaited reports on the abduction, ready to go to work on it, according to the Associated Press.

Under the "Lindbergh law," the department has full authority to handle kidnapings of an interstate character. However, it is the policy of the department to detail investigators to work in kidnapings as soon as reports are made and not to wait for interstate developments. Once an interstate angle is discovered, department officers said yesterday, the Federal men will take full charge.

Joseph J. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General in charge of kidnaping prosecutions, told The Post last night that the Bremer family were his "very dear friends."

Prosecutor of Machine Gun Kelly in the Urschell kidnaping in Oklahoma, Keenan has often been threatened with reprisals by gangsters. He would not comment last night on any suggestion that the latest move on the kidnaping front had the effect of a slap at him.

Mr. Keenan, who handled Government prosecution of the Hamm kidnaping case in St. Paul, said he was closely acquainted with Otto Bremer, prominent Minnesotan and uncle of the kidnaped man, and with the father of Edward Bremer.

Swedish Broadcasters Will Rebuild Station

Motala, Sweden (U.P.).—Sweden's principal broadcasting station, located here, will be rebuilt to be five times more powerful. The cost will be about a million and a half kronor. This will make it one of the most powerful in Europe.

The cost will be defrayed out of the license fee paid by owners of radio receiving sets, since no advertising on the air is allowed. By September 1, 640,391 such fees of about $2.50 had been paid, or 104.9 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Death Notices will be found in the first column of Page 6

Two More Under Pressure.

Pressure is being directed particularly at Arthur F. Mullen, Nebraska committeeman, and Orman W. Ewing, Utah committeeman.

In the Senate, a bill was introduced by Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, to amend the criminal code so as to forbid any officer, member or employe of a National political committee from practicing before any Government department or agency, or from attempting to influence any such agency directly or indirectly.

Senator Vandenberg's bill also would forbid any officer or member of a political committee from holding any position under the Treasury Department. This would affect W. A. Julian, Ohio National committeeman who is Treasurer of the United States.

Jed C. Adams, Texas committeeman, a member of the U. S. Board of Tax Appeals, probably would not be affected as this board, though passing on tax cases, is regarded as independent of the Treasury.

"President Roosevelt did a damned fine thing," Senator Vandenberg said with reference to the Democratic National committee house-cleaning. He said, however, his bill was drawn some days ago as a result of the appointment of the Michigan Democratic National committeeman, Horatio J. Abbott as Collector of Internal Revenue at Detroit.

Abbott Gets Clean Bill.

Senator Vandenberg consented to confirmation of Mr. Abbott only after obtaining from him a telegraphic statement that he had taken no part in direction or solicitation of political campaign funds in Michigan.

"I agree with the President," Senator Vandenberg said, "that there should be no possibility of mingling public authority with political revenue, either for private or for party gain."

Postmaster General Farley is awaiting the return of Mr. Mullen from Omaha to follow up the President's suggestion and urge that the Nebraska committeeman comply with the spirit of the White House policy. However, he may encounter stubborn opposition because Mr. Mullen was elected National committeeman by a State-wide Democratic primary vote.

Mr. Mullen's Argument.

Most other committeemen are chosen at the National nominating conventions. Because of the Nebraska law, Mr. Mullen may argue that he is responsible to the Democratic voters of Nebraska and not to Washington. Like Mr. Farley, the Cornhusker committeeman is big, good-natured, but stubborn as an Arkansas mule when aroused. Unfortunately there will be no gallery seats when they put on the gloves.

It was made plain at the White House yesterday that although Frank C. Walker's resignation as treasurer of the Democratic National committee was announced about the same time as Jackson's, there was no thought on the part of President Roosevelt that the rule he laid down was being transgressed by Mr. Walker, who wished to devote his whole time to his duties as executive director of the National Economic Council.

Mr. Farley expects to work on Utah's National committeeman, Orman W. Ewing, who joined a law office here and took bar examinations, but later withdrew from his legal connection. He may be offered a Federal post.

Farley Visits White House.

Mr. Farley was at the White House yesterday and while nothing was divulged it was assumed that the whole question of the political practice of law in Washington was discussed.

There is no indication that the White House wishes the Postmaster General to relinquish his national committee post at this time. It is true that probably 90 per cent of Mr. Farley's time is given over to political matters. About 200 persons go through the office every day.

In addition, Mr. Farley's duties as New York State chairman compel him to spend his week-ends in New York. As a result he is unable to give as much time to departmental work as he would like.

A number of national committeemen hold Federal offices although none of them are so burdened with political business as Gen. Farley.

Dudley Doolittle, Kansas committeeman, recently was appointed general agent of the Farm Credit Administration with headquarters at the Wichita (Kans.) Federal Land Bank. He severed his longstanding law partnership with Jouett Shouse here January 1 to accept the Federal position.

Senators Hold Post.

Five senators are also Democratic national committeemen: William G. McAdoo, of California; Huey P. Long, of Louisiana; Kenneth D. McKellar, of Tennessee; Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia; and Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming.

T. A. Walters, Idaho State chairman, is First Assistant Secretary of the Interior, a political appointment over which it is said Secretary of the Interior Ickes was not particularly happy.

Postmaster General Farley indicated yesterday that Herbert Fitzpatrick, West Virginia committeeman, on the legal staff of the Van Sweringen railroad interests, could not be classed with those upon whom the White House frown has fallen.

Evidence of the activity of Democratic politicians came from the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, where the administrator, Joseph H. Choate, jr., a Republican, said he had received numerous letters from Democratic lawyers making various requests for clients. He said no attention had been paid to them.

Robinson Urges Probe.

A suggestion that the Senate conduct another lobby investigation as a result of disclosures this week was made in a speech by Senator Arthur Robinson (Republican), Indiana.

"I do not know if Mr. Farley is among the men referred to by the President as engaged in lobbying activities," he said, "but this reminds me to say that in my opinion the lobby committee ought to be revived."

Senator Vandenberg's bill to amend the criminal code reads:

"No officer or member of a National committee of any political party and no employe thereof who is engaged in collection of political funds shall be eligible to hold any Government position directly or indirectly under the jurisdiction of the Treasury Department or any of its bureaus.

"No officer, member or employe of any such National committee shall be permitted to practice before any department, bureau, board, commission or independent agency of the Government, or attempt to influence directly or indirectly any decision by any such department, bureau, board, commission or independent agency of the Government, or attempt to influence directly or indirectly any decision by any such department, bureau, board, commission or independent agency."

Cloud Awarded Squadron Air Record Trophy

Marine Group Flew 3,519 Hours Without Accident.

As Acting Secretary Henry L. Roosevelt of the Navy and commanding officers of the Navy and Marine Corps looked on, President Roosevelt yesterday made the ninth annual presentation of the Herbert Schiff Memorial Trophy to Lieut. David L. Cloud, jr., U. S. M. C., commanding officer of Observation Plane Squadron V. O. 7-M.

His squadron is credited with having the most successful year of any squadron in Navy or Marine aviation, in flying hours without accident to personnel or material.

The award is made annually by the family of the late Herbert Schiff, a Naval Reserve aviator killed on active duty in 1924, to Navy or Marine aviators credited with outstanding flying records.

The winning squadron, during the last competitive year, served six months in Nicaragua and six months with aircraft squadrons at Quantico, flying 3,519 hours without accident.

Sued for Hitting Butler, Crane Scion Admits It

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (AP).—Testimony that he had slapped Emil Kiechele, butler, was given today by Richard Crane Gartz, son of Mrs. Kate Crane Gartz, of the wealthy Chicago Crane plumbing manufacturing family, in trial of the butler's $85,000 damage suit.

Gartz said he found Kiechele "looking into a bathroom" at the Gartz home in Palos Verdes, where there were some women guests.

Tavern Rum Prices Fixed in 1779 Revealed.

New Market, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Prophecies of the ultimate purchase of comparatively cheap whisky in this section have recalled to the recollection of elderly citizens the high prices paid by their fathers and grandfathers.

Old minute books of Shenandoah County court reveal such high prices. At a session of the court held to fix the "ordinary" (tavern) rates for the year 1779, there are found the following figures expressed in pounds and shillings.

"Rum, by the gal., 10 pounds; French Brandy, per ditto, 10 pounds; Whisky, per ditto, 4 pounds, 16 shillings; Wine, per ditto, 10 pounds; Cyder & Beer, per ditto, 1 pound, 4 shillings; Rum Toddy, per quart, with loaf sugar, 1 pound, 4 shillings; Whisky, ditto, per ditto, 12 shillings."

E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Set upon and chloroformed by a gang of masked men, while motoring to London, following a visit to Lord Keynsham and his sister, Lady Louise, Sir Humphrey Rossitor, England's Home Secretary, awakens to a terrifying situation. He is in a cell. Confronting him is a man—masked. "Cecil Brandt," says the man, "is to be hanged, as you are well aware, at 8 o'clock in the morning. You alone can save him—get him a reprieve. If you don't, you too must hang—here and now."

51,000 Hired Under Virginia CWA Projects

$9,000,000 Being Spent Within State, Director Declares.

Richmond, Jan. 18 (AP).—William A. Smith, civil works administrator for Virginia, reported in an address here tonight that up to January 12 there had been created in Virginia, on local and State projects, work with 51,000 men and women on the pay roll.

By reason of this work, totaling 13,669,935 man hours, nearly $9,600,000 is being released within the State, he said.

In a review of the civil works development, Smith said that on November 20 approximately 6,000 people went to work in regular jobs at regular wages as CWA employes. In the face of tremendous organization difficulties, by December 16 this number had been increased to 26,000.

Of the amount expended, school projects have absorbed more than one-third. Parks and playgrounds have been allotted more than $800,000. Highways and streets have received allotments of more than $2,000,000. Sewers, sanitation and water extension projects are absorbing close to $1,000,000. Cemetery improvements amount to nearly $200,000.

"But this," he added, "is only part of the picture—Federal projects given to this Administration for execution are now under construction and furnishing employment to 14,200 Virginians, and call for the expenditure of approximately $2,500,000.

"Thus," he said, "to January 12 we see more than $12,000,000 is being poured into Virginia to relieve unemployment. This has absorbed on Federal, State and local projects 65,000 men and women as of January 12."

The Once Over.

DEVALUATION OF THE BAMBINO.

Administration action to stem the devaluation of home run hitters is necessary. The price of Babe Ruths has broken more alarmingly than that of cotton, wheat or corn, and something must be done if confidence in the New Deal is to be maintained.

• • • •

Babe Ruth, by accepting $35,000, has taken a downward plunge of $17,000 in a single transaction.

• • • •

• • • •

An immediate conference between President Roosevelt and the Bean Trust is urgent in order that the swat level may be raised to a decent height.

• • • •

Economists disagree as to a proper course, but three plans have been suggested:

1. Nationalization of home runs.
2. Government operation of Babe Ruth.
3. A $1,000,000 Babe Ruth financing plan through the BRFC (Babe Ruth Financing Corporation).

• • • •

• • • •

The proposal calls for the doubling of the Ruthian sock content, fixing by Federal statute a home run content of 100 a season.

• • • •

To the cry, "But the Babe can not hit 100 home runs a season," the Bean Trust replies, "Not the capitalistic home run, perhaps, but we will meet this difficult by reducing the size of home runs."

• • • •

How? By making a two-base hit good for four bases during the period of the emergency!

• • • •

"Something must be done and done quickly," said a man close to Washington (a Baltimore resident, to be exact) today. "Babe Ruth, at $35,000 a year, is comparatively out of work and penniless. What does that mean? It means that he can apply for Federal aid.

• • • •

"And what does that mean? It means that he will be eligible for work in the Reforestation Camps or the CWA. Ruth in his stride would clear all the forests in ten days, throwing all the other men out of work."

• • • •

CLEARING UP THE MONETARY PROBLEM.

As Elmer Twitchell understands it, what the President wants to give the dollar is floating power, streamlines, free wheeling and some knees to take up the slack.

No matter what happens to the currency, it is officially announced at Washington that checks must continue to be of the usual dimensions and the signatures full-sized.

Broadway is reported anticipating a sequel to "Men in White." It will be a play about the business world, called "Men in Red."

"Good Samaritans" Rob Motorist of $72

Brookline, Mass. (U.P.).—What Jacob Goldman thought were Good Samaritans turned out to be ordinary robbers. Goldman's automobile got stuck in a snow drift and two men who came along helped him dig it out. When he was about to give them some change for their assistance, the men held him up with a gun and robbed him of $72 and several personal articles.

places additional relief and work funds squarely up to Congress, with speedy action by that body necessary if the works program is to be continued. As originally intended by Hopkins, the first allotment was to carry the program to February 15 at full schedule, with an additional appropriation of $350,000,000 necessary to continue it to May 1.

If, by imposing cuts, Hopkins can eke his program out to February 15, Congress has but four weeks to provide money for a new program. President Roosevelt has disclosed he will ask $1,166,000,000 for continuing the emergency program and will send his next message to Congress on this subject.

Order Extended January 10.

In his ruling, McCarl refered to Executive Order No. 6440 dated November 18, 1933, which extended the 15 per cent pay cut to ordinary employes of the various emergency administrations. He then points out that Order No. 6440 did not list the Federal Civil Works Administration as one of the departments affected. He then stated that "Executive Order No. 6554, dated January 10, 1934, provides: 'The provisions of Executive Order No. 6440, dated November 18, 1933, prescribing rates of compensation of Government employes in emergency agencies not subject to the classification act and acts amendatory thereof, are hereby extended to include, in addition to the agencies named in that order, all other existing emergency agencies and those hereafter created.

• • •"

"It may be concluded, therefore," McCarl wrote, "that the total or basic salary rate of employes under the regular establishments of the Government paid from funds allotted by the Federal Civil Works Administration were not specifically required to be fixed pursuant to the Executive Order No. 6440, dated November 18, 1933, until after January 10, 1934."

Yesterday's order reduced CWA laborers from a 5-day, 30-hour week to a 4-day, 24-hour week, and cut Civil Works Service workers from a 39-hour week to a 30-hour week. Authorities here estimated it would cut the District CWA pay roll about $50,000 a week.

Relief requests from States, which have depleted Federal Emergency Relief funds to a point where they will last until about March 1, have been increasing. Figures released by the Administration showed that up to yesterday it had granted $350,608,000 to States for relief and purchased 114,423,733 pounds of foodstuffs for distribution.

McCarl held the Executive order applied to all other emergency establishments. "The same action is required as to employes of any other emergency organization or employe of regular establishments paid from funds allotted by such emergency organizations brought within the terms of the Executive orders," he wrote, "not subject to the regular classification act."

Jury's Chores at Home Save Accused Woman

Flint, Mich. (U.P.).—Rather than face the prospect of trying to round up their cows for milking after dark a jury changed its vote and permitted a verdict of acquittal in the case of a woman charged with slaying her two children, former Coroner C. H. O'Neill said today. O'Neill said the jury reported a vote of 11 to 1 for a guilty verdict. Eleven jurors, anxious to finish the day's chores on their farms before dark, agreed finally to vote with the "hold-out," who was willing to stay all night to prove his point, according to the story told to O'Neill.

Robin Refuses to Leave Woman Who Fixed Leg

Holyoke, Mass. (U.P.).—Mrs. Arthur Bennett's favorite pet is a robin she found, crippled by a fall from its nest last spring. She nursed its broken leg until it was healed, with the idea of then setting it free. But the robin preferred the comforts of home to the rigors of the wide open spaces, and so it still lives at the Bennet residence.

came to his office and "begged" him to rush to Washington to represent the Robertson interests before Postmaster General Brown in consideration of an air-mail contract on the St. Louis-New Orleans route.

Brown, reported Sacks, did not have a "favorable slant" on Robertson and charged that the operator had "received Government concessions, exploited them, and then sold out with $300,000 profit."

Testimony Differs.

"So I told him that St. Louis was an air-minded city, and I told him it would be the making of the city," affirmed the witness. "Because I felt that I was representing the interests of my community just as well as Robertson."

Robertson's testimony varied from Sacks' particularly in regard to the locale of the first business encounter the two men had. Robertson maintained that Sacks came to his plant with his suggestions.

The slim, young-looking airman, who was a World War pilot, gave his testimony in conjunction with his brother and partner, Frank. Between them they produced a series of letters and telegrams relating to what they called the "Sacks incident" in their unsuccessful attempt to get a mail award. Much of the correspondence related the brothers' written denial that Sacks represented them in any of the conferences held both in Washington and St. Louis.

Glover Expected Tuesday.

Previous testimony of enormous profits realized on minute initial investments in air line stock was amplified by George J. Mead, former vice president of the United Aircraft and Transport Corporation.

On an initial investment of $207 in the Pratt-Whitney Co., Mead made $7,800,000 profit in cash, and still holds stock which, at the current market quotation, is worth $750,000.

Questioned about the wide variance between investment and profits, Mead explained:

"I put a lot of very strenuous work in the development of the company. What I put in was worth a lot more than $207."

The hearing adjourned until Tuesday, when it is expected former Assistant Postmaster General Glover will appear to explain previous testimony that he ordered his office files burned shortly before he left office last March 4.

Candidacy for Bench Withdrawn by O'Brien

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 18 (AP).—Gov. Lehman today verified a report that former Mayor John P. O'Brien, of New York City, had withdrawn as a candidate for appointment to the Supreme Court bench in the first judicial district.

"It is quite true," the governor said. "I had a letter from Mayor O'Brien asking me not to give further consideration to his name."

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

A New Thorne Smith.

In spite of the fact that the Smiths far outnumber any other clan in the census, it remains surprising that in a given generation there is usually but one conspicuous writer with that surname. A hundred years ago the Smith of his time was Sydney Smith, churchman, cofounder of the Edinburgh Review and indefatigable wit. "Macaulay," he once remarked, "is like a book in breeches. He has occasional flashes of silence that make his conversation perfectly delightful." A biography of Sydney Smith is to appear shortly from the house of Harper.

The Smith of our time bears the baptismal name of Thorne. He is likewise a wit, but very different, a hundred years different. In the jargon of the turf, Thorne Smith is by H. G. Wells out of "La Vie Parisienne." It makes a fearful and wonderful and unbelievably funny combination.

• • • •

"Skin and Bones" (Doubleday Doran, $2) is Thorne Smith's latest example of a device which, though not trade-marked, is all his. Part comes straight from the earlier stories of H. G. Wells based on a pseudo-scientific hoax, a potion to make a man invisible, or to expand external time. Thus Thorne Smith, who in "Topper" allowed his hero to become invisible at will, in "Turnabout" caused a man and his wife to exchange sexes, and in "The Night Life of the Gods" ordained that several statues in the Metropolitan Museum of Art should come to life and gambol up and down Broadway. Once you grant Thorne Simth his hilarious assumption, he remains within logical bounds.

Add to the hoax a saucy and ribald turn in all ensuing episodes. And then add an incongruous but sincere compassion for mankind (so essentially like that of James Branch Cabell), which Thorne Smith shows in his roasting satire of such institutions as commuting, suburban life and the advertising profession. Dull smugness to him is like a red shirt to a bull. The result of all this is a top layer in his books sufficient for most of us, as laugh-provoking as anything now written. I was chortling out loud, twice to the page, almost but not quite to the end of "Skin and Bones."

The above-mentioned Sydney Smith is credited with another remark very much to the point. "Heat ma'am!" he once exclaimed. "It was so dreadful here that I found there was nothing left for it but to take off my flesh and sit in my bones!"

But it was not for the heat that Quintus Bland, hero of Thorne Smith's tale, suddenly found himself a living, literal skeleton, endowed only with his senses and the faculties of talking, walking and swallowing quantities of strong drink. He was, by profession, a photographer, and he had been making chemical experiments toward an X-ray film. By mischance the compound turned against him, with this resulting predicament. A predicament, moreover, which he could not control—now he would find himself a skeleton, now a flesh-and-blood man.

I had best leave to your imagination (or better yet to your reading the book) the unparalleled excitement which a drunken skeleton will cause in a night club. Or what a barber does who has wrapped a perfectly usual head in a hot towel and unwraps it to discover a skull. The endless possibilities of the device are, to say the least, pretty well covered by Mr. Smith. For a considerable while they are wholly successful.

But the truth is that the variations on the theme are drawn out something more than a shade too long. You find yourself thinking ahead of the author and a little disappointed when he catches up. Foregoing a quarter of the incidents would have improved the book.

There was one place, though, where I was for a moment greatly impressed. At the end of the book a masked mob of infuriated neighbors set out after the skeleton and shot him down in the woods. The scene held a touch of high and moving tragedy. It was, I thought, a superb conclusion. But there was a slight thickness under my thumb and I turned the page to come upon a chapter of recovery, of more pranks which turned sour in the mouth. I rather wish that Thorne Smith had left the suddenly pathetic and universal figure of Quintus Bland lying quietly among the leaves.

Valley G. O. P. Opposes Chase Redistrict Bill

Republicans Fear Division of Strength If Plan Is Adopted.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Strong opposition is being expressed by Shenandoah Valley Republican leaders against the Chase redistricting bill, introduced in the Virginia State Senate, which would place Rockingham and Shenandoah Counties, two Republican strongholds, in separate Congressional districts.

Republican leaders claim enactment of the Chase bill would place the new Seventh and Eighth Districts forever in the Democratic column, whereas if Rockingham and Shenandoah Counties are kept in one district the Republican party would show strength. These two counties contributed largely to the election of J. A. Garber, Republican, to Congress in 1928. The same was true when Judge John Paul won the Congressional seat in the 1920 election.

There is a strong sentiment in the two counties to remain in one Congressional District and to include enough Piedmont Counties to give the District its needed population.

The Chase bill proposes to place Rockingham County in the new Seventh District and Shenandoah County in the enlarged Eighth District. Rockingham County claims the largest number of independent voters of any county in Virginia. In 1928, it gave Hoover (Republican), more than 3,000 majority. In 1932, Roosevelt (Democrat), carried it by 700 majority. Byrd and Peery (Democrats), carried it over Wise and McWane, for U. S. Senator and Governor, by 1,800. It is represented in the Legislature by one Democrat and one Republican.

Shenandoah County, on the other hand, seldom is in the Democratic column. Its Republican majority ranges from 100 to 1,800. Senator Byrd is the only Democrat who carried the county. The county belongs to a State senatorial district, which Byrd represented in the General Assembly for years.

Gov. George C. Peery's new taxation plan, in which he proposes to raise $1,000,000 additional for public schools, will increase the State license taxes on Harrisonburg merchants by $5,000, it was estimated last night by George Andrus, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, after a conference with local business men.

Another proposal of the new governor affects Harrisonburg. This is his plan to tax municipalities for electric power and water they sell outside the city limits. Mayor Ward Swank said last night that the city's revenue from this source is a relatively small amount and the services are furnished largely as a convenience to the residents.

Two Convicted After Shooting

Rockingham Jury Metes Out 9-Year Terms in Via Case.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Dennis Via, 20, of Port Republic, and J. L. Kelly, 30, of Harriston, were each sentenced to nine years in the penitentiary today by a Rockingham court jury on a charge of shooting Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Smith and their son, Leon, in East Rockingham last December.

Via, the son-in-law of the Smith's, and Kelly were given three years on each of the three counts in which they were tried. Smith was only slightly wounded, but Mrs. Smith and the son required hospital attention. Via and Kelly were wounded in return fire.

The two men claimed they were shot at as they walked past the house, and returned the fire. The State maintained Via and Kelly fired first.

Virginia Women Urge Liquor Sales in Hotel Dining Rooms

Fear Dispensary System Will See Flask-Toting Continue.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Richmond, Jan. 18.—Women wet leaders today urged the General Assembly to permit liquor sales in hotels.

Mrs. George Sloane, of Warrenton, former State chairman of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, has written every member of the Legislature attacking the dispensary proposals. Prominent women indorsing hotel sales are Mrs. Julian Keith, of Warrenton; Miss Charlotte Nolan, of Middleburg; Mrs. T. P. Thompson, of Norfolk; Mrs. R. A. Owens, of Lynchburg, and Mrs. George Warren, Mrs. Robert Barton and Mrs. M. O. Jones, all of Richmond.

"We believe," she wrote, "the proposed law will mean continuance of the hip-pocket flask, as well as the continuation of clandestine drinking.

"As I understand the pending bill, it means the return of the purchase of hard liquor by the bottle to be drunk in private rooms of hotels, as distinguished from the purchase of mixed drinks by the glass to be drunk openly and decently in their dining rooms.

"The present bill invites not only clandestine drinking, but drunkenness, it being human nature to consume the whole bottle once it has been purchased and conveyed to the hotel room."

Taxless School Aid Suggested

Substitute for Peery's Plan Is Offered to House Group.

Richmond, Jan. 18 (AP).—A method of meeting Gov. Peery's request for increased State support of schools without imposing the million dollars of new taxes he recommended was offered for consideration before the House Appropriations Committee today by its chairman, Ashton Dovell of Williamsburg.

Dovell, addressing the committee at its first meeting, suggested that if the proceeds of a 15 per cent cut in special funds, as compared with 1932—the same curtailment recommended in general fund items by Gov. Pollard—be paid into the general fund as an unexpended balance, there would be enough to finance Gov. Peery's school program.

Meanwhile the Senate privileges and elections committee reported out ten to two the Holt Congressional Redistricting bill. The bill is due up for its first reading tomorrow and its floor debate early next week.

CWA Workers To Begin Soon On 2 Airports

Martinsburg and Elkins Projects Initiated After Approval.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—At least 120 CWA workers are expected to begin work soon on Shepherd Flying Field near here, State approval of which has just been given.

The flying field project has been pushed hard for several weeks by local business men and aviation enthusiasts. They plan, with the aid of the loan, to make Shepherd Field one of the unexcelled flying fields of the Central East, qualified to serve the National commercial transport lines in every particular, including sufficient night illumination. In order that the field might qualify for the loan, City Council last week took a five-year lease and purchasing option on the field, with its operation to continue in the hands of the Berkeley Aviation Club.

The State CWA at Charleston, after ordering a 15 per cent reduction in the number of men working for CWA in Berkeley County, is considering adoption of the "stagger" system of work under CWA in towns of 2,500 population and in unincorporated portions of counties.

Would Double Force.

This system, if adopted for the State, will apply only to work being done in Berkeley County outside of Martinsburg. Under this plan, twice as many workers would be given employment on the county projects, and 500 new workers may be taken on.

Distribution of a second 10,000 pounds of salt-cured pork from Federal Emergency Relief Administration was begun here today, under direction of John W. Dean. The pork is from a Chicago packing plant, and is dispensed in 6-pound packages, already wrapped, except to smaller families, which get a 3-pound cut.

Another Airport Job.

Elkins, W. Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Work has started on a municipal airport at Harper's flying field as a CWA project. A surveying crew is establishing boundary lines around the 108-acre tract on the Beverly road, 3 miles south of the city, and laborers will start work later in the week.

Paul H. Keener, district supervisor of the State road commission, is in charge of the project. Two employes of the American Airways Co., whose planes now pass near Elkins twice daily, and are expected eventually to make use of the landing field here, are assisting. R. O. Zarbaugh will be resident supervisor. Mr. Keener said the $29,706 allowed for the project would give Elkins a first-class airport in three months.

Postmaster Job Open.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.). The Civil Service Commission has announced examination for postmaster at Raphine, Va. The salary is $1,100.

Dance at Leonardtown.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.). A dance will be held here tomorrow by the American Legion post to raise funds to establish a drum and bugle corps of local Boy Scouts.

3 Probes Start In Fatal Blast At Cumberland

Owner of House Held as Wife, Child Are Hurt; Still Blamed.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 18 (AP).—Three separate investigations were under way today in the explosion which toppled a Hilltop Drive house down an embankment, killing two men and injuring two other occupants.

Gene Nixon, who leased the house less than three months ago, was held for questioning. He arrived a few minutes after the blast.

Officials blamed the explosion on a liquor still and said police had uncovered a 100-gallon still and 17 five-gallon kegs of whisky in the basement.

The victims were Joseph Lechliter, 23, of Cumberland, and Ira Crabtree, 24, of Oldtown. Nixon said they were friends and often were at his home.

Jeanora, 9-year-old daughter of Nixon, suffered a broken arm and nose. She was taken to a local hospital, where her mother, Mrs. Lenora Nixon, was treated for bruises.

"I want to see the kid," was Nixon's main concern after he was taken to the police station, as he made repeated inquiries concerning his daughter's condition. He engaged J. Phillip Roman, former State's attorney here, as counsel.

The investigations were launched by the State police, county and city authorities, with County Investigator Terrence Boyle and Acting Coroner Joseph B. Finan taking an active part.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.). The sophomore class of the State Teachers' College presented a play, "Davy Jones' Locker," written by Miss Anne Murchison, of Rocky Mount, N. C., a former student, in a class program last night.

Miss Dorothy Mayo, of Charlottesville, danced. Choruses in other numbers included Misses Mildred Ware, Thelma Evans, Lucy Mae Copley, Georgia Jessup, Harriet Bowen, Elsis Watson, Frances Gaines, Margaret Hendricks, Dorothy McGuire, Elton Waring, Olivia Wheeler, Greata Hisey, Helen Batista, Elizabeth Bane, Elizabeth Hart, Ruth Elam, and Audrey Rose.

Farm Credit Unit Assured Staunton

Relief Agency to Extend Over 5 Counties.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.). A regional branch of the Production Credit Corporation, of Baltimore, will be formed at Staunton on January 25, to provide a relief agency for farmers of Rockingham, Augusta, Highland, Bath and Rockbridge Counties.

H. G. Cummings, field agent of the Baltimore corporation, explained here yesterday that loans for production can only be made through local corporations, similar to the Farm Land Bank set-up. The corporation will make short-time loans for the purchase of cattle, crop production, poultry production, and small fruit growing enterprises.

City Assessors Named.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Petersburg's three assessors for the five-year real estate assessment will receive $1,500 each for their services. They are S. Daley Craig, E. B. J. Whitmore and R. L. Young.

CWA Leaders Are Under Fire InLeonardtown

Charges of Favoritism Are Made by Leading Citizens.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Echoes of the spirited meeting held at the St. Mary's Courthouse at Leonardtown Saturday still prevail, and the main topic of discussion wherever two or more are gathered together is what local CWA officials will do about charges of favoritism openly made against them.

A. Kingsley Love, local attorney and several times Republican opponent of Stephen Gambrill as candidate for Congress, feels that his part in Saturday's protest meeting was not clearly defined.

He says that while he is in full accord with President Roosevelt's idea of helping the needy through the CWA, he has numerous instances at hand where the needy persons have been ignored by the local office and work given to those who do not need it.

Love is a member of the local CWA committee of nine. Joseph Mattingly and Richard H. Pembroke, also CWA committeemen, defended appointments made by the local board.

Appointments to Stand.

John W. Jones, local CWA administrator, today said no changes would be made.

It is now up to a committee of nine citizens named Saturday, one from each district of St. Marys County, to demand satisfaction from the local CWA office, or appeal to Administrator Hopkins in Washington.

Middletown, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Work is expected to be started by next week on extensive improvements to the Middletown Memorial Hall, as a Civil Works Administration project. Approval for the work was given by the State administrator yesterday.

About 12 men are expected to be given employment.

Other Jobs Sought.

The burgess and commissioners have also submitted several other projects to CWA officials for approvals, including regrading and resurfacing several of the town's streeets. About 25 men would be given work.

A new storage reservoir near the site of the present one, 2 miles east of Middletown, is also sought. Negotiations are under way with Jefferson Patterson, Washington, for purchase of necessary land.

The new reservoir will be more than 2,000,000 gallons capacity.

As the construction of a new reservoir will involve practically all labor, it is believed it can be built under the CWA at practically no cost to the town, but at the same time would give employment to 25 or 30 men for five or six weeks.

Information Held Up.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Reluctance on the part of property owners to give information sought by the Government in the real property census being taken here, was reported by John W. Hoffman, district supervisor in charge of the survey.

Hagerstown was one of 63 cities where such a census is being taken.

The question which most property oners declined to answer was whether or not there was a mortgage on their property.

The information sought will deal with housing conditions, the number of families now living in one-family unit houses, equipment in households, such as plumbing, heating, refrigeration, &c., and will determine future Home Loan action.

Health Work Widened.

The Health Department, in charge of an extensive sanitary survey and with a number of sanitary projects in Washington County, was authorized yesterday to extend the scope of its work under the CWA and is now permitted to supply labor free to private individuals for the construction of cesspools and septic tanks.

Sanitary surveys have been completed in Pinesburg, Maugensville, Smithsburg and Cavetown, and surveys have started in Halfway, Sharpsburg, Williamsport and Funkstown.

W., B. & A. Upheld In Bus Line Fight

Over-Ruling of Demurrer to Its Appeal Affirmed.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.). The Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric Railroad today scored a point in its fight to prevent motorbus competition between Annapolis and Baltimore, when the Court of Appeals remanded an action for further proceedings in the Circuit Court of Baltimore City.

The tribunal affirmed an order passed by Judge Samuel K. Dennis in the lower curt, overruling a demurrer interposed by the Public Service Commission to the railway's appeal from a permit granted the Red Star Line to operate a bus system from the Eastern Shore to Baltimore via Annapolis.

Under the ruling passed today, the Service Commission will be required to answer contentions raised by George Weems Williams, receiver of the railway. Hitherto the commission's only action was a simple demurrer.

'33 Warmest Year In Norfolk Section

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—John J. Murphy, meteorologist of the Weather Bureau here, today said that 1933 was the warmest year on record in this section of Virginia.

The mean temperature averaged 2.4 degrees warmer than normal, and was 61.5 degrees, a trifle above the previous high established in 1921, the previous record breaker.

Unusually warm and dry weather also was reported by the central United States Weather Bureau at Richmond.

All Alone

Boy, 8, Sees Mother, Last of His Family, Buried.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Brief and simple rites were conducted yesterday for Mrs. Mary Desboro by Capt. James Shipp, of the Salvation Army.

Leroy Desboro, 8, only survivor of the family of five which came here a year ago, sobbed as he saw his mother's casket lowered into the same grave which already held the bodies of his father and sister, who were drowned in the Rappahannock River June 7, and of his infant brother, who died of malnutrition two days later.

George Legge Out for Mayor In Cumberland

Six Candidates Qualify for Chief of Police in Frostburg.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.). George W. Legge yesterday feild notice of his candidacy for mayor.

Mr. Legge, twice a candidate for city council, intended to run again this year, but since announcement by Mayor George Henderson that he would not be a candidate for re-election, Mr. Legge decided to enter the mayoralty contest.

Dr. Thomas W. Koon, who was defeated by Henderson two years ago, is expected also to enter the race. He is a Democrat and Legge is a Republican.

Frostburg, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.). There are six qualified candidates for chief of police of Frostburg, following the recent dismissal of Chief Arch Baker by Police Commissioner John D. Keller.

The six who have qualified by passing examination before the Frostburg Civil Service Board are Ronald Kreider, Benjamin Thomas, Clarence Finzel, Harry Fuller, Earl Blough and George Tippen. It is expected appointment will be made February 5.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—City council candidates, the city Democratic executive committee has decided, will be nominated by primary election April 3, and February 1 was fixed as the final date to file notice of candidacy.

Four candidates will be nominated, three to fill four-year terms beginning September 1 and a fourth to fill the unexpired term of Charles D. Fox, resigned, which will end August 31, 1936. Dr. Frank S. Cooper recently was appointed to succeed Mr. Fox, but whether he will enter the primary is not known.

Unlicensed Road "Ads" Result in $7.50 Fine

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Failure to obtain a permit before placing poster advertisements along Maryland highways brought a fine of $7.50 upon Ben Berman, of Baltimore, when arraigned before Police Justice Thomas G. Basil, in Annapolis.

Berman was arrested at the instance of Paul Southerland, Anne Arundel County employe of the State Roads Commission. The State's road-sign law was passed by the Legislature two years ago.

Fire Tower to Aid Safety in 2 States

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.). A cooperative fire tower is to be erected on the Maryland-Pennsylvania line in Washington County, near the Allegany County border, to aid in forest-fire prevention and patrol work.

District Forester H. C. Buckingham said the tower will be 90 feet high and there will be a watchman on duty day and night. The tower is to be erected by the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Rivers and will be maintained by Maryland and Pennsylvania. The watchman will be able to serve a large area in both States.

Telephone lines to connect all forest camps of the Civilian Conservation Corps in Allegany and Garrett Counties are being constructed, it was announced by District Forester Buckingham.

Bad Start

Crash Halts Honeymoon, But Court Is Kind.

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (AP).—The honeymoon of the Herbert A. Hartungs, of Laurelton, N. Y., was laid up for repairs here today.

En route to Washington from New York, where they were married Tuesday night, Hartung crashed into a traffic beacon. They were taken to a hospital and there were congratulated by Patrolman Theodore White, who presented the bridegroom with a handsomely printed summons to traffic court on a charge of reckless driving.

Everybody was nice about the whole thing today. The magistrate dismissed the charge and the police commissioner's secretary said the beacon really hadn't been damaged much anyway, and to regard payment for repairs as a wedding gift from the police department.

HOW WOMEN CAN WIN MEN AND MEN WIN

The Favor of Other Men

Unless two pints of bile juice flow daily from your liver into your bowels, your food decays in your bowels. This poisons your whole body. Movements get hard and constipated. You get yellow tongue, yellow skin, pimples, dull eyes, bad breath, bad taste, gas, dizziness, headache. You have become an ugly-looking, foul-smelling, sour-thinking person. You have lost your personal charm. Everybody wants to run from you.

But don't take salts, mineral waters, oils, laxative pills, laxative candies or chewing gums and expect them to get rid of this poison that destroys your personal charm. They can't do it, for they only move out the tail end of your bowels and that doesn't take away enough of the decayed poison. Cosmetics won't help at all.

Only a free flow of your bile juice will stop this decay of poison in your bowels. The one mild vegetable medicine which starts a free flow of your bile juice is Carter's Little Liver Pills. No calomel (mercury) in Carter's. Only fine, mild vegetable extracts. If you would bring back your personal charm to win men, start taking Carter's Little Liver Pills according to directions, today. 25¢ at drug stores.

Refuse "something just as good," for it may gripe, loosen teeth or scald rectum. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for. © 1933, C. M. Co.

Roanoke CWA Rolls Doubled In Two Weeks

Few Jobless Remain in Waynesboro; Danville Fears Work's End.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—CWA figures here show the local pay roll has been more than doubled in the last two weeks and more than quadrupled in the last month. Checks last week made out to 1,002 persons totaled $14,835.86, compared to $7,054.65 for the week ended December 28 and $3,653 for the week ended December 15.

H. E. Mecredy, assistant disbursing officer, said 861 persons were hourly employes, and 708 of the 861 were employed at common labor. The pay roll includes 92 persons in the administrative offices.

Both the local and district CWA offices are swamped by applicants for work, despite notices that it is useless for applicants to apply.

Few Jobless Left.

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—The CWA is rapidly solving the unemployment situation in this area, with Mrs. Mattie Rice, Augusta County relief official, and Mrs. M. V. Thacker, city welfare director, reporting a rapid decline in charity calls.

Police report only two men have requested lodging quarters during the last 30 days, in contrast with the former crowds of transients.

Richmond, Jan. 18 (AP).—George W. Guy, State director of the Federal Reemployment Service for Virginia, last night denied recently published reports that Augusta County was one of the counties referred to by him when he said "charges of irregularities in the awarding of CWA jobs" had necessitated the dispatching of investigators.

Mr. Guy has not divulged the names of the counties to which he referred.

Extension of Funds Sought.

Danville, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Not more than 60 per cent of the local CWA projects will have been completed by February 15, according to H. W. Hylton, local administrator.

Unless provision is made to carry these pay rolls through the winter, more than 900 workers will become charges of the local welfare organization.

The Virginia League of Municipalities is circulating a letter urging administrative bodies to telegraph the Virginia Senators urging prolonging of Federal funds on these works.

Riley Stone, local member of the Tennessee State reemployment committee, is in Nashville this week seeking action on a protest against State orders that laid off 76 CWA workers in Bristol, Tenn. 40 Summoned To Grand Jury In Lynch Case

Alleged Liquor Violators Cited for Hearing in Hagerstown.

Princess Anne, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Eighteen State policemen have been called here for Tuesday to testify before the Somerset County grand jury's investigation of the Armwood lynching. A total of about 40 witnesses has been summoned by State's Attorney John B. Robins.

They all were examined by Attorney General William Preston Lane, jr., in Baltimore after the crime last October 18. Witnesses include Capt. Edward McK. Johnson and Lieut. Ruxton Ridgley, of the State police.

Among other cases to be considered here is that of Samuel Jones, colored, now in the Baltimore City Jail, accused of the murder of Mrs. Margaret Brumbley, who was beaten and stabbed with an ice pick in her home at Marion Station, near here, New Year's Eve.

Two Named on Rum Charge.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Two alleged violators of the liquor laws were cited to appear before United States Commissioner D. Angle Wolfinger here, as Federal alcoholic agents continued their drive in this section to stamp out the illicit liquor trade.

2 Virginia Women Recall Lee's Kindness to Them as Little Girls

By Marion Butler.

In the summer of 1863 a little girl in a pinafore and with long curls slipped away from her grandmother's watchful eye and ran across the fields to the Confederate camp near Culpeper, Va. Unnoticed, she stood in the shade watching the gray-clad soldiers pass. Finally, one of them sat down in the shade beside her. He was tall, more than 6 feet, with white hair and a long beard. He stretched out a hand to her and smiled.

"Come sit on my lap and talk with me," he invited.

Now, 71 years later, a woman with white hair herself now, sits in a rambling farm house just off Lee highway. Each year as January 19 approaches she looks back to that meeting.

"It was Gen. Lee," she says—then nods regretfully, "and I wouldn't go to him. I was too shy."

Remembers Lee Well.

Though she only saw the Confederate commander in chief from a distance after that, Miss Eddie Virginia Millan, of Oakley Farm, Legato, kept her memory of Robert E. Lee's features and fatherly smile through the years. She is 77 years old now.

Sitting in her Virginia home she recalled yesterday that her mother had fled with her to Culpeper when Federal troops, on their way to Bull Run, stopped at Oakley. They stayed on the Culpeper farm of her grandmother, Mrs. Leroy Cooper, all through the war.

Miss Millan recalls her father, a member of the Black Horse Cavalry Troop, stealing through the lines many times to visit them here. Once he nearly was caught by a detachment of Federal troops as he was sitting in the garden. They got his coat, but he escaped through the hedge.

Upon their return after the war, the Millans found Oakley dismantled. Ceilings, partitions, even floors were torn out, and the lawn was the burial ground of 75 Union soldiers.

Friend Also Knew Lee.

Miss Millan delights in pointing out that not 10 miles from Oakley, in a little white bungalow on a quiet Fairfax street, lives a friend who also knew Lee when she was a little girl. She is Mrs. W. P. Moncure, 81, formerly of Richmond.

Mrs. Moncure's father, Dr. Alfred Hughes, was the Lee family physician during Mrs. Lee's sojourn in Richmond throughout the war. As little Mary Hughes, she sat on the famous general's knee while her father tended the failing health of Lee's wife. Lee's snow-white hair always fascinated her as a child, and one day she ventured to ask him for a lock of it. Today, this cherished lock of Lee's hair is the property of her son, Frank P. Moncure, a lawyer of Stafford, Va.

Both Miss Millan and Mrs. Moncure have exchanged tales and studied the life of the man who was their childhood hero, and still is "the greatest man we have ever known." Especially on Lee's birthday, January 19, they like to recount their own reminiscences, and their store of Lee memories is considered unique.

One of their favorite anecdotes is the tale of his visit to the widow of gallant Gen. A. P. Hill, of Petersburg. Hill's 8-year-old daughter opened the door. She had a wriggling collie puppy in her arms. Recognizing the general, she instantly accorded him the greatest honor she could bestow.

"Gen. Lee, kiss Bobby Lee," she demanded, holding up her mascot.

Legend insists that the general gallantly bent to the young lady's request.

Recess to Test Tax Bill Fails In West Virginia

Hiner Plan, Called "Last Hope," in Position for Quick Action.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Behind barred doors in executive session, both Houses of the West Virginia Legislature wrangled for hours today over plans for a recess to permit a supreme court test of the newest tax collection bill and finally abandoned the recess idea.

The Hiner tax collection bill, termed "the last hope," meanwhile was in a position for speedy action. This plan calls for allocation of 70 per cent of the maximum levies under the State tax amendment for current needs of local units and the remainder for bonded debts. Excess levies would be permitted where extremely heavy indebtedness exists.

The House finance committee today reported out the drug store whisky liberalizing bill with recommendation for passage. The bill would permit sales on certificates instead of prescriptions and reduce the State tax from 50 to 20 cents a pint.

Thomas O'B. Flynn, Wheeling editor, today urged before the Senate finance committee passage of legislation to equalize rates and tax valuations of utilities.

Temporary suspension of hundreds of municipal employes throughout the State was forecast today by Mayor A. G. Martin of Fairmont, president of the West Virginia League of Municipalities, unless the State tax snarl is untangled within the next ten days.

"There are no funds," Martin said, "and we simply can not continue to assume the responsibility of incurring debts for lights, for labor and for salaries for every municipal employe."

Martin is in Charleston to present a resolution to the Legislature, adopted by the league yesterday, urging immediate financial aid for cities and towns.

School teachers of Marion County today were given the option by the county board of education of resigning their positions or continuing without positive guarantee of salary.

Reports of committees showed that the Westminster Fire Company has grown during 1933, purchasing a new $12,500 pumper. The company responded to 54 alarms during the year, 26 of which were local calls.

Stratford Fete Will Honor Lee

Richmond Also Observes Memorial Today.

Richmond, Jan. 18 (AP).—Reverently and humbly, Virginia and the Southland tomorrow, on his birthday, will pay homage to Robert E. Lee—perhaps the most hallowed name in Southern history.

At Stratford, where Lee was born and where he spent the early years of his life, simple exercises will be held tomorrow afternoon. Richmond, the Capital of the Confederacy, in whose defense he fought back the repeated thrusts of Federal troops in a courageous, heartbreakingly futile stand, will show again the stars and bars and will tell again how Lee chose to cast his fortunes with his native State rather than to accept the command of the National Army.

In Richmond the few remaining veterans of Lee Camp, some of them of Lee's command, will be entertained by Lee Chapter of the U. D. C. while at the White House of the Confederacy, now the Confederate Museum. Visitors will be admitted without charge.

Bristol Red Cross Elects.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—R. C. Boswell, young insurance man, who directed the campaign that enrolled 1,226 members and collected $3,187.15 for the year's budget, has been elected 1934 chairman of the Bristol Chapter of the American Red Cross. He succeeds R. F. Lander.

State Approves School Stadium In Virginia City

Fredericksburg Project Will Be Done by CWA; Others Mount.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Richmond CWA officials have approved the plans to construct a high school stadium here as a CWA project. The CWA officials first thought the stadium project might be more appropriately done through the PWA.

Approximately 250 men are employed under the CWA on Commerce street, Kenmore avenue, the high school grounds, the Gunnery Spring property, at Hazel Run, and in the city park here.

Levin J. Houston, local CWA administrator, is preparing the plans for initiation of the project with Philip N. Stern, local architect. Mr. Stern was architect of the high school building, and will make the stadium harmonize.

Workmen on the Kenmore avenue sewer project have uncovered several skeletons during their diggings. Some think the bones are those of soldiers killed here during the Civil War; others contend the site might once have been a private burying ground.

Clarke Countian Named.

Berryville, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Daniel S. Elsea, of Berryville, has been appointed business census enumerator for Clarke County. Mr. Elsea is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Elsea, and a graduate of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, receiving his B. S. degree in engineering in 1931.

Luray, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—The National reemployment office here has placed 268 men on PWA jobs and 570 on CWA jobs in Page County within the past seven weeks. Seven women have been given work in the county.

This total lacks about 500 of absorbing the county's unemployed men, as there are still 1,377 men's names on file and 106 women's names. A total of 2,328 had asked for employment.

The weekly pay roll of about 577 CWA men is about $6,400 weekly. Mayor Harry M. Strickler is disbursing agent for most of the public works projects.

Lexington Adds Jobs.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—The town council has authorized the water committee to borrow up to $5,000 to finance extensions to water and sewer systems in the community, the work to start immediately.

In addition, the CWA will furnish $656.50 for improvements to the sewer system and $4,765.50 for extension and repairs to the water system.

Other new CWA projects recently approved are road project in Walker Creek district, $4,765.20; supplementary Rockingham County school project for improvement of grounds, sanitation, &c., $3,995, and project at Goshen to build an earth dam to prevent flooding of school grounds, $250.

500 Negroes Studying.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—More than 500 Negroes have enrolled in the CWA night school here.

Unemployed teachers are teaching classes which cover elementary and graded school work. It has been impossible to take care of all those who wish to enroll. Ages of these pupils vary from 16 to 50 years.

60 Busy in New Market.

New Market, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—New Market's second CWA project, a sewer extension from Lime street to Depot street, got under way today. It will employ 30 men for 50 days, bringing to 60 the men now employed and raising the weekly pay roll to $850. The town's Main street project, to employ 10 more men, is expected to begin in a few days.

The local airport project, to cost $18,806, and employ 48 men for 90 days, has not been approved yet, but officials hope this work will begin next week.

Seven veterans were guests at the luncheon. Their ages totaled 825 years, an average of 89.28 each. Charles B. Linney, camp commander, was unable to attend the luncheon. He was a member of Company D, Twenty-fifth Virginia Infantry.

John Bowie Strange Camp was named in honor of the colonel of the Nineteenth Virginia Regiment, killed at Boonesboro, September 14, 1862. It was organized August 22, 1880.

Kid Cupid Annexes Staunton Decision

Staunton, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—More marriages and fewer divorces were recorded in Staunton during 1933, a survey of records in corporation court reveals.

There were 98 marriages last year, compared with 81 in 1932. In 1932 there were 20 divorces; in 1933, only 16.

By far the most popular "marrying parson" in Staunton was the Rev. David F. Glovier, of St. Paul's United Brethren Church, who married more than 80 couples.

CWA Job Jumping Charge Dismissed

Bluefield, W. Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—Charges of having quit a mine job to obtain CWA employment against R. E. Gilmore, of Bishop, Va., have been dismissed by Federal Commissioner Thomas H. Scott.

Gilmore was arrested recently on complaint of Jeff D. Cartwright, manager of the Mercer County reemployment office.

Commissioner Scott said the fact Gilmore was barred from returning to his old job at Bishop and could not obtain CWA work constituted sufficient punishment.

Valley Dealers To Fight Peery Tax Proposal

Change in License Levy Would Cost Merchants $5,000, They Say.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Harrisonburg business interests will file a vigorous protest against part of Gov. Peery's new taxation plan, which, if approved by the General Assembly, would add $5,000 to the operating expenses of 125 retail establishments here by changing the license tax from purchases to sales.

One large store owner stated today the change would increase its State license tax $400, while others declared the change would mean 25 to 40 per cent increases.

What action the Harrisonburg City Council will take on another of Gov. Peery's recommendations, which calls for taxing the revenue from municipal light and water plants outside the corporate limits, has not been determined. The city-owned light and power plant has 225 customers outside the corporate limits, with $11,279 revenue annually, and the city's water plant has 225 customers outside the corporate limits, with revenue of $3,153 annually.

"The city's light and water plants serve these people outside the corporate limits more as a matter of service than for profit," said Mayor Ward Swank, "Nearly all are farmers. They live along our pipe and electric light lines in the county, and the service was requested of the city and not sought by the city. The same rate charged in the city is charged to county people."

Richmond, Jan. 18 (AP).—Transfer of revenue from real estate recordation taxes from the State treasury to the various cities and counties is provided in a bill offered in the State Senate by Senator John Wicker, of Richmond.

Senator Wicker estimated the localities would derive approximately $300,000 annually from the proposed legislation.

House To House.

Secretary Morgenthau's proposal to institute a house-to-house campaign to collect $200,000,000 in back taxes has great possibilities—in theory, anyhow; and we are laying great store by theory these days.

One of Mr. Morgenthau's men would ring Mrs. Jones' doorbell, and if she wasn't out playing bridge, tell her that Uncle Sam had a lot of obligations these days and was hard up, and that, anyway, he wanted his money pronto, even if it is worth only 60 cents on the dollar. The collector couldn't threaten to turn off the gas or take out the phone—not, at least, until the bill "coordinating" communications under Government control has passed—but he could menace her otherwise. He could say, for instance, that unless she handed over the overdue income tax, he would explain right then and there how Mr. Morgenthau proposed to work the gold reserve act for her benefit. And if she didn't come across the collector could threaten to expound the Warren commodity dollar theory, or take her husband off the civil works pay roll, or stop his cotton check.

It's a grand scheme and it ought to work—at least as well as farm relief. But the tired housewife who spends half her time answering doorbells ought to have some consideration. Mr. Morgenthau ought to work out an arrangement under which his men could become agents for other corporations, too. Along with collecting taxes, they might, on commission to be paid Uncle Sam, read meters, sell Fuller brushes, take the census of the unemployed, collect installments on the refrigerator and sell life insurance.

Behind The Scenes.

The French "sense of fair play" may have dictated the League's invitation to Germany to assist in arranging the preliminaries for the Saar plebescite in 1935—an invitation which Germany has refused—but the polite language of the invitation and the refusal hardly give an accurate picture of what is going on behind the scenes. Actually, settlement of the question is accompanied by feverish jockeying, diplomatic wire pulling and Machiavellian strategy.

On its face, the Saar question seems subject to reasonable solution. By the Treaty of Versailles Germany relinquished control of this rich coal basin, with its 1,000,000 population and its mines with estimated reserves of some 20,000,000,000 tons of coal. The territory was then handed over to the League of Nations, to be governed by an international commission for 15 years, after which the people of the Saar were to determine by plebiscite whether they wanted to rejoin Germany, unite with France, or establish an autonomous state under protection of the League. The coal mines were given to France in reparation for Germany's destruction of French mines. If the Saar decides to rejoin Germany, the Reich has the option to repurchase the coal fields at a price to be fixed by League appraisers.

As the plebiscite year approaches, however, the problem has become more complicated by the advent of Hitlerism, inspiring German fears and French hopes over what had seemed a certain outcome. France has no hope that the people of the Saar will vote to unite with her; the population is overwhelmingly German and rather tactless efforts to Gallicize it have only provoked irritation. Under almost no condition could the people of the basin be expected to join France. Nor was there much doubt, until the past few months, that they would vote overwhelmingly to return to Germany. But recent events have indicated at least an apprehension on the part of Herr Hitler, for which there are a number of reasons.

A majority of the people in the Saar are Roman Catholics and the Church has no love for Hitler or the Nazis. Moreover, there has recently been a large influx of German refugees into the Saar, resulting in an active propaganda against reunion with the Fatherland. Since the Saar is heavily industrial, there is also a large native element of Communists and Socialists who, in voting to rejoin the Reich, might vote to have themselves "liquidated," perhaps in political prison camps. Both Hitler and France recognized all these elements of the situation recently when the German Chancellor vainly proposed that the Saar should be returned without a vote.

France's hope, and Germany's fear, is that the population may vote to remain an autonomous state under League protection, or that a split vote may salvage some of the territory for France. After the Council of the League has canvassed the vote in the Saar plebiscite, which is to be held by "communes and districts," it is empowered to allot the territory "as a whole or a part." Both France and Germany remember what happened in Upper Silesia. Although the plebiscited territory as a whole voted overwhelmingly to remain Germanic, a few districts showed Polish majorities and a division highly favorable to Poland was effected. Whether true or not, German claims that Poland was awarded 70 per cent of the industry and virtually 90 per cent of the coal fields in Upper Silesia.

The French sense of fair play was doubtless behind the invitation to Germany to sit in on the council session which arranges the plebescite. But that sense has not completely obliterated the desire to make profit for France out of the Hitlerite excesses.

Indecent Haste.

Hopes of adequate public hearings on the gold reserve bill, before it is railroaded through a dazed and apathetic Congress, are none too good. The House has already demonstrated its incapacity by subordinating all the major issues to an undignified squabble as to which of two rival committees should have the "honor" of first reporting favorably on the measure. Such hearings as have been held by the House Coinage Committee have shown no great competence to consider legislation of this character. Nor has the House Banking Committee demonstrated the leadership which its title implies.

From the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, however, something more is to be expected, if only because it numbers Senator Carter Glass among its members. The courageous little Virginian, who has stood almost alone in his refusal to "take orders" and write blank checks for the Treasury, may be counted upon to fight to the last ditch. He has demonstrated this by flatly questioning the specious document in which Attorney General Cummings upheld the Constitutionality of the bill.

"There is no limitation upon the power of the Legislature in this respect," says Mr. Cummings, "if the purpose be a public one, and just compensation be paid or rendered to the owner for the property taken." Of course it is partly to determine whether the enforced surrender of the metallic reserves is equitable and in the public interest that public and protracted hearings on this bill are essential. Mr. Cummings' opinion, here and elsewhere, evades instead of meeting the vital issues involved.

The effect of this legislation on the Federal Reserve System seems to a pusillanimous Congress a matter unworthy of serious consideration. Undoubtedly that system has, by complacent toleration of many weaknesses, forfeited much of the respect and support which should have been its right in this emergency. But it is one thing to admit the failings of the present system and quite another to indorse without any adequate inquiry the untried, unexplained and only partially revealed substitute which the Administration appears to have in mind. The deficiencies of the Federal Reserve System are as nothing compared with the dangers inherent in the system of one-man domination which is now being slipped over on an unsuspecting and befuddled Nation.

The very speed which the Administration urges for the passage of this bill is tacit admittance that it fears impartial and expert examination of its tortuous passages and implications. There is today no panic psychology, no banking collapse, no disastrous financial emergency to justify these strong-arm tactics. Compared with the scrupulous care and painstaking inquiry which accompanied establishment of the Federal Reserve System, the celerity with which its demolition is being effected is little short of appalling.

It was for just such purposes as this—to check roughshod dictatorship in matters of a complicated and highly technical nature—that the committee system in Congress was established. In upholding its obvious duties the House has already proved derelict. For the Senate to follow suit would be disastrous in the fullest meaning of the word. It is not merely the financial, it is also the political foundations of the Nation which are menaced by the indecent haste to legalize the gold reserve bill.

E. Brooke Lee.

Maj. E. Brooke Lee's 15 years of political leadership in Montgomery County has earned him the reputation of being, as one of his friends puts it, a "dynamo in breeches." Indeed, the citizens of Montgomery County have come to regard him as the moving spirit of nearly every political and civil undertaking within its borders.

Although Maj. Lee is still a young man, he has been the dominant influence in Montgomery County affairs since 1919, when he was elected State comptroller. He has served in the Maryland Legislature and during two terms was Speaker of the House of Delegates. For two years he was secretary of state at Annapolis. Throughout Gov. Ritchie's long service as chief executive Maj. Lee has been one of his closest friends and advisers. At present he is a member of the State road commission, for which he serves as spokesman.

All of the aforementioned activities tended to draw Maj. Lee away from Montgomery County, but his interest in the community where his ancestors have lived and died for several generations has never waned. As leader of the Democratic organization in the county he is credited with responsibility for construction of roads, schools and county buildings and reorganization of suburban governments. It was he who launched the idea of a Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission to encourage the beautification of suburban districts, adjacent to Washington. His influence in the development of communities bordering the District is no less significant than his service to his State.

In announcing his retirement as president of the Democratic organization in Montgomery County Maj. Lee makes no pretense of withdrawing from politics. He is merely "unloading the details and the daily contact work" upon trusted associates so that he will be able to devote more time to his extensive private affairs. But his ardent interest in the welfare of his county and State and his remarkable capacity for work may be expected to keep Maj. Lee in the position of an influential "power behind the throne" in Montgomery County.

Poe's Anniversary.

Philadelphia and Baltimore step into the literary limelight today, the 125th anniversary of the birth of Edgar Allan Poe, with their formal dedications of memorials to that poet.

Baltimore, the city of his heart, where stands his modest tomb in Westminster Churchyard, adds to her imposing list of Poe shrines with a memorial room in the Enoch Pratt Free Library. In this room, sponsored by the Edgar Allan Poe Society of Baltimore, has been assembled rare Poeana, including letters and poems in Poe's own delicate calligraphy. Still more interesting items are in the loan collection, such as a bust of Dante from the home of his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Allan, undoubtedly the inspiration of the much quoted line, "On the pallid bust of Pallas just above my chamber door."

In Philadelphia the anniversary celebration centers around the opening of the Poe House in which the poet wrote "The Raven," "The Gold Bug," "The Pit and the Pendulum" and "The Tell Tale Heart." The restoration of this "small house of a great poet" is due, largely, to the efforts of Mr. Richard Gimbel, a public-spirited Philadelphian, who is said to own the most extensive Poe collection in the world. The cottage will be opened to the public and Mr. Gimbel has added to the memorial the neighboring house, which he restored from a ramshackle tenement and turned into a museum for Poe relics.

These new memorials emphasize the Poe renaissance in America. Time, the healer of all hurts, has done much to heal the wrongs in the life of Edgar Allan Poe. Today his own country, aye the world, appreciates the poet whom our country of yesterday permitted to starve and suffer in obscurity, neglect and misunderstanding. This child of destiny, song-haunted and woe-driven—found his few years of life—as men measure Time—but a pilgrimage of sorrow to the Altar of the Beautiful whose high priest and votary he was to be throughout his days.

The sensitive soul of Edgar Allan Poe is now beyond all mortal hurt. Neither the praise nor the censure of man may bruise his spirit or lure him from the eternal verities. In the words of another poet, Shelley, to whom he was spiritually akin, "he hath outsoared the shadow of our night."

No Place For Spoils.

Renewal of the patronage raid upon the Library of Congress suggests that some representatives are at the end of their rope in seeking jobs for their constituents. For many years the Library has been carefully guarded against patronage seekers. It would be difficult to supply the type of personnel that it requires through the spoils system. Congressmen would not seek to break through Dr. Putnam's defense against patronage hunters unless the job situation were desperate.

Representative McClintic's confidence that several hundred jobs will be opened in the Library of Congress to "worthy Democrats" appears to be ultra-optimistic. The law requires that "employes in the Library service shall be selected by the librarian, by reason of special aptitude for the work of the Library, and solely with reference to their fitness for their particular duties." It is difficult to believe that Dr. Putnam would be a party to an agreement that would result in the dismissal of a large number of the employes under his supervision to make way for political appointees.

Although the Library of Congress does not draw its personnel from the eligible lists of the Civil Service Commission, it maintains a rigid merit system of its own. Employes are selected on the basis of their education, experience and personal qualifications. No applicant, according to Dr. Putnam, has ever been questioned as to his political affiliations. Individuals with strong political backing are frequently turned away because other applicants without political support present higher qualifications.

It would be a pity indeed if the high personnel standards which the Library has built up over a period of many years should be sacrificed to sate the greed of the patronage hunters.

Liberalism in the South.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fiasco of the student uprising in Alexandria seems to have ended as all comic opera farces end. Status quo has triumphed, and hookworm and inertia once more settles over the sleeping populace of Alexandria.

By this time the people should know that there is only one thing worse in the South than being a member of a darker, or alien race; and that is to have a desire for knowledge. Calverton claims that with the exception of the Negro poets, no poet of any importance has come from the Southland since the time of Lanier. Erskine Caldwell lives in Maine. William Faulkner makes his living between Hollywood and New York, and only uses the South for mint juleps. In spite of the fact some writers of note do live in the South few Southerners buy their books. If it were not for a Northern market the Southern writer would be forced into peonage with the poor whites of Georgia and Virginia. Virginius Dabney wrote a book on liberalism in the South, and so far I have discovered five Southerners who read it; Mr. Dabney is forced to add to his income by writing for Northern publications. The South accepts Blair Niles, but knows little of Myra Page or Grace Lumpkin; possibly because these two writers are sympathetic to the underdog. How many in Virginia have read Edwin Mims' "The Advancing South?" A large percentage are familiar with James Branch Cabell because he voted for Hoover and is a resident of Richmond; but few are intelligent enough to read Anatole France, the source of Cabell's bon mots. Southern universities and Southern publications have remained consistently reactionary, with the exception of the Liberal Club at the University of Virginia, and the magazine, Contempo, at Chapel Hill, N. C., and possibly, The Westminister Magazine, at Oglethorpe University, Georgia. There is a certain amount of liberalism in such towns as Richmond, Charlottesville, Lynchburg, Chapel Hill, Birmingham and others; but in Alexandria the cultural and political domination savors too much of the Klan; one is almost afraid to pronounce the name of Gertrude Stein.

All of this merely proves Bertrand Russell's contention that the public schools can turn out good (?) citizens, but they are not, in most cases, turning out useful citizens, or intelligent citizens. I doubt that the high school students of Alexandria are mentally capable of understanding the economic factors that cause a deficit in school funds.

Federal Control of Telegraph Companies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent issue of The Post carried an announcement of proposed legislation to create a communications commission and stated further that protests had been made regarding the proposal to pass at this session legislation permitting the merger of the telegraph companies.

Some members of Congress may not wish to consider the question, but that will not help the condition of the employes of the telegraph companies. Every one knows that as the net revenues of these companies dwindled, the number of employes was reduced, the remainder received heavy cuts in wages, and only recently numerous employes were summarily dismissed from the service.

To one who is familiar with the operation of these companies it is obvious there are four major causes for their present condition. These are as follows:

1. Cut-throat methods of competition.

2. Unfair practices, not only between the companies, but private firms and corporations, with discrimination in favor of the heavy users of the telegraph.

3. Duplication of equipment and facilities.

4. An antiquated rate structure that does not meet existing conditions and prevents real competition between the telephones and telegraph.

Federal control, if properly exercised, should eliminate these conditions, with results that would be of considerable benefit to the employes and their dependents, to say nothing of the service rendered to the country as a whole. C. J. W.

A Housemaid Protests.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read your article in regard to a Cleveland housemaid conference and some of the things they had to put up with. You do not have to go as far as Cleveland to find those conditions. Right here in Washington it is just as bad.

I know from experience. I started to do the housework on the 1st day of June, 1933, and the 14th of July 1 was compelled to go to the hospital for 22 days, 11 days being spent on fracture board. I had to get up at 5 o'clock in the morning one day to wash and next to iron (three wash-days every week). Not only that, if they were away at night or had a party, I was required to stay up until they came in (regardless of time), and to serve when they had a party.

They required you to do a man's work, as well as a woman's, for that was what put me in the hospital, carrying a cedar chest from the basement to the first floor. You were constantly reminded that if you did not do what you were told to do, there were plenty more who would. They had their third maid in four weeks after I quit. One working for a friend of mine after having quit there said, "No wonder that lady is in the hospital; it is a wonder she isn't dead."

And the worst part is the District had to pay the hospital bill, as I was unable to collect anything, as housework does not come under the compensation act, but it should.

MRS. S. M.

New Deal Measures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Listeners-in to radio talkers and readers of newspapers are eager to understand the New Deal, the commodity dollar, the NRA and the score of new economic theories and problems. Many have decided the NRA was proper in that it brought about reemployment, but they dread the future if it brings the same overproduction, underconsumption and cocksure complacency that previously prevailed.

As to the commodity dollar sought by revaluing the gold dollar to bring farm prices up to former levels—what will it amount to if the farmer, once out of debt, resumes his inclination to remortgage the homestead? Among the listeners and readers are some thinkers who believe the results sought by the commodity dollar could have been secured by a reasonable remonetization of silver. Their motto is, preserve the gold standard but provide for silver.

Under the New Deal most people believe the big New York banks and financiers must help the Government as do other patriotic citizens without profits and tax evasions. They should help railroads and industries but not seek to pile up burdens of bonds and overhead charges which will terminate in bankruptcy.

The great bulk of the people are behind Roosevelt and hope he will be spared to finish what he has begun, but all should be resolved not to resume the hifaluting notion that the new prosperity is coming to stay regardless of our extravagant performances.

JEREMIAH JOHNSON.

Urging Presidential Support.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My conviction is that our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom raised up Franklin D. Roosevelt to be President to overthrow the great idol "Mammon" (the almighty dollar) and to turn the Nation to righteousness.

Thus far this good man has shown himself to be the greatest President the country has ever had. And if he continues to seek Divine guidance and wisdom from on High, his plans are bound to work well to the true interests of the United States and to the glory of God.

I strongly urge every Representative and every Senator to give the President their full and hearty support and forget politics and parties.

Whether Money Is Worth Much or Little, You Still Get Your Regular Share

By Robert Quillen

The story of inflation is long and tedious, but the things you need to know about it can be told in few and simple words.

When Mr. Roosevelt determined to raise the price of farm products and other commodities, he set about it by an indirect way.

The natural way to raise the price of any commodity is to make it scarce. Since that could not be done, the only way to make commodities worth more was to make money worth less.

How do you make money worth less? Well, you make milk worth less by removing part of the cream.

The cream in money is gold. Mankind happens to think gold valuable and therefore governments use it as money.

The quickest way to make money worth less would be to say: "Your paper dollar is still worth a gold dollar, but the gold dollar now contains only 13 grains of gold and 12.8 grains of scrap metal."

Mr. Roosevelt went at it backward. Instead of giving less gold for a paper dollar, he decided to charge more paper dollars for a given amount of gold.

It amounts to the same thing, except that he can change the price of gold every day, but he couldn't so easily change the percentage of gold in minted coins.

Anyway, paper money (the only kind we have now, except for a little silver) is worth less compared with gold, and people are supposed to say: "If it takes more of this paper money to buy an ounce of gold, it should take more of it to buy a bushel of corn or a pair of shoes or a board."

The people don't feel that way yet.

It is nice if you owe money and have something to sell and the price goes up.

It is pretty tough if you work for a salary and your salary doesn't go up as prices do.

But it won't change things much in the end; for whatever name you give the apple, the little fellow still gets the core.

Carlisle Bargeron

BARGERON.

ONE of the effects of the President's monetary policy seems to have escaped attention. I don't see any reference to it in any of the editorial comment nor of that of the man in the street. All the discussion seems to turn upon the question of whether it is a forerunner of stabilization, whether it spells defeat for the fiat money advocates, or whether and how much the cost of living will go up.

Yet one of the most important effects it seems to me, one that is very definite and tangible, and brooking of no dispute, is that it has taken Representative Rankin's mind off the veterans. He has become a monetary expert. If that isn't an accomplishment worthy of the applause of the populace, I'll eat my hat.

• • • • •

No one's heart beat more for the veterans than Mr. Rankin's, no voice was lifted louder or more persistently. It was he more than anyone else, I think, who brought about the situation where the country rose up in arms and caused the slashing in veterans' benefits that took place early last year. He had, a couple of years previously, championed a bill so extravagant that the Republicans, in beating it off, had to set up a system of compensation for all disabled veterans, whether the disability had any war connection or not.

He was pursuing his demands for the veterans, too, right up to the time the monetary question came along. Somehow that intrigued him. Whether it was simply a case of the evolution of a congressman or not, this Mississippian advanced his interests to a higher and more academic realm.

• • • • •

I'll bet they have noticed his advance down in Mississippi, too. Wherever his friends and well-wishers gather I'll bet they discuss how the boy Rankin has steadily progressed in the Nation's Capital, how he started out as a mere champion of the veterans, something that most anyone can be, and developed into a monetary expert.

I know he is one because every time Mr. Roosevelt does anything about money Mr. Rankin issues a statement approving his action. Manifestly he could not do this if he did not understand it and to understand it certainly stamps him as an expert.

Why, only the other day when Mr. Roosevelt sent up his message on devaluing the dollar, Mr. Rankin issued a statment saying in effect that it was just exactly what the President should do. I don't think it is a case of Mr. Roosevelt conferring with Mr. Rankin before he makes these moves, but he seems to strike Mr. Rankin's approval every time. Maybe it is mental telepathy.

• • • • •

On this latest occasion there were statements by such monetary experts as Speaker Rainey, who, I believe, was right guarded in his comment in this instance, by such experts as Joe Robinson and others. And then right there among them was the comment of Expert Rankin.

Some of the newspaper boys the other day happened to recall that Mr. Rankin's interest used to be the veterans, that, indeed, he is chairman of the House Veterans' Committee. So they asked him if he planned to get the committee together soon. They were surprised at the change that has come over the man. He had that distracted look of all monetary experts, the veterans seemed a matter of the vague past.

Now Mr. Roosevelt's principal purpose in his monetary experiments is to lift prices. Whether he will succeed or not remains to be seen. But he already has one accomplishment to his credit.

Reading Plays.

Toward the close of the nineteenth century Henry James said that many people did not consider that modern plays had any relation to literature because no publisher would think of printing them. In Germany and France new plays regularly appeared in book form, and there were probably in all European and American nations a hundred persons who knew Ibsen by reading to one who saw him acted. But English and American plays, as a rule, did not appear in print.

Finally with the passage of the internatoinal copyright law and by the constant and untiring efforts of the English dramatist, Henry Arthur Jones, the playwrights began to challenge literary criticism, as they had hitherto faced the critics of the first night.

The works of Pinero, Jones, Shaw, Galsworthy, Barrie and others began to appear on publishers' lists. In fact, the single greatest difference between the publishers' announcements of 1890 and thoes of 1910 was the very large number of new plays.

In America, where, with the exception of municipal, little, community and amateur theaters, the only opportunity to see new and important plays is in the City of New York, the reading of dramas is essential if one wishes to keep up with dramatic productions. An excellent plan is for a literary club to take up one dramatist liek Shaw or Barrie or Galsworthy and spend a year in the study of his productions. And now we have the complete plays of these masters in one volume for each.

"Girl Without a Room" Reviewed at Metropolitan—New Screen and Stage Bills

Lively Comedy With Ace Cast Trifle Risque

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

"GIRL WITHOUT A ROOM," Paramount, adaptation of a story by Jack Pearl, adapted to the screen by Frank Butler and Claude Binyon, featuring Charles Farrell, Marguerite Churchill, Charlie Ruggles, Walter Woolf, Gregory Ratoff, Grace Bradley and William Carleton. Music and lyrics by Will Jason and Val Burton; dances staged by Larry Ceballos. Directed by Raish Murphy. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Although from time to time frankly and unblushingly flouting both the ethics and the conventionalities laid down by the Hays Code as a guide for chaste and straitlaced picture-making, this mildly lunatic study of impecunious student life in the Latin Quarter of Paris possesses romantic, musical and comic elements that entitle it to serious consideration as a source of spirited and slightly shocking entertainment.

In no sense either big or important, "Girl Without a Room," nevertheless, is reminiscent in musical and story treatment of both Rouben Mamoulien's revolutionary "Love Me Tonight," starring Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald, and Rene Clair's shady classic of the French capital, "Sous les Trois de Paris," known in this country as "Under the Roofs of Paris."

It has snap, movement and fun and presents its catchy tunes as an integral part of its sustained narrative instead of as unrelated interpolations.

Gay and Giddy.

The whole thing is a gay and giddy commentary upon the Parisian experiences of an unsophisticated and bashful small-town painter from the hills of Tennessee, who wins a scholarship abroad and no sooner arrives in the Street of the Three Angels, on Montmartre, than Kay Loring a breezy and bold young baggage from Atlanta, decides to move in and share his apartment. She is ousted, in time, by a bizarre creature from Russia—protected by a heavily bearded father and three uncles, by the names of Trotsky, Walksky, Galloposky and Sitsky—but not until a sturdy vein of romance has been developed and Walter Wolf, light operatic barytone, has successfully accomplished his screen debut as a brandy-guzzling good-for-nothing, whose final sacrificial gesture brings the story to a properly vigorous climax and romantic denouement.

Among the more engaging of the picture's whimsies are the devices employed by the starving geniuses of the garrets to gorge themselves at no expense as "guests" of the newly arrived Mr. Duncan from Tennessee; Charles Ruggles' fabulous pistol duel with the father of the fiery young Russian, Nada, and that splendid burlesque of the art gallery prize awards in which Tom Duncan's grotesque painting of "The Wheel of Life" wins the grand prix by virtue of being hung upside down!

"Portrait of a Whistle."

The attempt at this masterpiece, it may be said in passing, was prompted by Mr. Ruggles' eloquent plea for creative art, expressed in his enormously amusing song concerning his "Portrait of a Whistle," and why an "artist" should not be a "photographer." Very clever and very droll.

There are, too, a few minor items, such as the wrestling match staged by Mr. Ruggles, as Vergil Crock, and Grace Bradley, as Nada, the gold-digger, over a few paltry francs she decided to appropriate from his meager funds, Gregory Ratoff's full-dress uniforms as The General, former commander in the army of the Czar of all the Russias and now janitor of the tumbledown studio building in which these "artists" all live, and the glimpses of Montmartre's night life, but interest manages to keep itself pretty consistently centered in the interrupted love affair of Kay and Tom, the two youngsters from the South.

Marguerite Churchill and Charles Farrell contribute performances unlike any either has heretofore brought to the screen in these pivotal roles. Miss Churchill emerges as a young woman of some warmth and physical lure and Mr. Farrell as an actor with an unsuspected facility for ingenuous and naive characterization.

Walter Woolf a "Find."

Charles Ruggles and Gregory Ratoff acquit themselves with accustomed gusto in the major comedy roles, and Walter Woolf demonstrates a considerable endowment of screen personality and acting intelligence over and above the familiar asset of his fine voice, which, by the way, is not heard half enough. Sam Ash, as a strolling street singer, also adds a touch of color to the musical embellishment of the piece and numerous others are effectively atmospheric.

The new issue of the Paramount Sound News and a Vitaphone Brevity, "Around the Clock," starring Norma Terriss and Lynne Overman, supported by a well-trained ensemble of singers and dancers, among whom are to be found the Eton Boys, are the shorter subjects that supplement a feature that is risque, rollicking and only occasionally too rowdy for comfortable family consumption.

Old-timers in the theater will recognize in the figure of the gendarme who briefly directed Tom Duncan (Charles Farrell) upon his arrival in Paris, John T. Murray, one time ace of the Shubert musical comedy and revue forces. Mr. Murray, a decade or two—or possibly three—ago was a player of almost stellar eminence. Now he is content to do a bit in a picture that lays no claim to being a "special." And the strange part of it is, that he looks not a day older now than he did 15 or 20 years ago, nor does his ability betray any serious deterioration. That's the way it is in the theater nowadays!

New Honors.

Elliott Nugent, playwright, stage and screen actor, recently has added the direction of motion pictures to the varied list of his theatrical achievements and is said to have won new laurels with "If I Were Free," co-starring Irene Dunne and Clive Brook. This is RKO-Radio's picturization of John Van Druten's London stage hit, "Behold, We Live," and opens at RKO-Keith's tomorrow.

Nugent will be recalled for his co-authorship of "The Kibitzer" and many other successes. He has also played prominent roles in a number of pictures. He recently directed "Three Cornered Moon."

Old Col. Jimmie Lake, Ninth street's Chesterfieldian glass of fashion and mould of form, is reviving one of the cherished traditions of "smoker circuit" burlesque next week in bringing back what he cagily terms the "Beef Trust Burlesques," with Billy Watson at their head. Since there seems to be a slight confusion in Billy Watsons there were two of them, you know—it is perhaps just as well that the good Col. Lake does not particularize this one as "Billy Watson and his Beef Trust," the old, original billing. However, and under whatever auspices, it is high time we had another look at the "Beef Trust," although it is doubtful if the present will even remotely approximate the original's total poundage. They don't make 'em like that these days!

Attention!

Of more immediate interest, at the moment, by reason of their greater imminence are these attractions, either already on view or to be made so tomorrow, if you can manage the dash:

Irene Dunne, Clive Brook in "If I Were Free"—RKO-Keith's.

Eddie Cantor in "Roman Scandals"—Palace.

'Buddy' Rogers, In Person, the Fox Headliner

Buddy Rogers, favorite of millions of cinema followers, and recent attraction of radio and the stage, comes in person to Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow to head a lavish revue that presents a wealth of talent and Buddy's own orchestra, the California Cavaliers.

"Eight Girls in a Boat," with Betty Gray, the Washington girl who, along with seven others from various sections of the country, was selected especially for this film, and Dorothy Wilson and Douglas Montgomery in the cast, is the screen feature that augments the personal appearance of "America's Boy Friend."

In addition to having a prominent part in the film which chronicles a delightful and refreshing story of youth, Miss Gray, who has just returned from Hollywood, will appear daily on the Fox stage.

"Eight Girls in a Boat" is a story laid against the background of an exclusive girls' school whose rigid rules thunder, "No Men Allowed." Despite this barrier, one girl, whose only thoughts are of romance, meets a boy, falls in love and is confronted with an inevitable and tragic result.

Richard Wallace has given the film brilliant direction, and the picture is loaded with delightful comedy to offset its dramatic moments.

Buddy Rogers will present a wealth of talent in what has been described as an unusually bright stage revue. Neila Goddelle, Jean Goodner, Raymond Baird and Jack Douglas are featured along with Buddy's California Cavaliers.

The Fox Orchestra, under Phil Lampkin, will offer an overture and the program will be completed with news events and short subjects.

Cantor Second Week in Comic Hit at Palace

Eddie Cantor tomorrow will enter his second week of cutting hilarious comedy capers on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater, where his latest musical extravaganza, "Roman Scandals" will be held over.

This film marks the beady-eyed comedian's fourth annual appearance on the screen under the sponsorship of Samuel Goldwyn. Robert Sherwood and George S. Kaufman wrote "Roman Scandals" especially to indulge the Cantor flair for comedy.

"Roman Scandals" is a Roman holiday of beauty, song and laughs, the latter, particularly, attaining a new high when generated by the delightful succession of Eddie's gags.

Ruth Etting, David Manners, Gloria Stuart, Veree Teasdale, Edward Arnold and 100 of Hollywood's prettiest coryphees comprise the cast that supports this popular comedian. Cantor and Miss Etting sing four tuneful melodies which were written by Al Dubin, Harry Warren and L. Wolfe Gilbert.

Its story is that of a wide-eyed, brow-beaten lad in West Rome, Okla., who, by the power of his own imagination is carried back to strange adventures in ancient Rome. It is a riotous, uproaring story, embellished by lavish settings.

Fourteen-Star Roadshow Back To Renew Run

So palatable has been that entertainment feast, "Dinner at Eight," with its spicing of more stars than have ever before appeared in a talking picture, that Loew's Columbia Theater will bring it back tomorrow, following a notable two weeks' run at the Palace Theater.

This third week of downtown exhibition of this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer drama will continue at popular prices.

"Dinner at Eight" is an absorbing picturization of the successful George S. Kaufman-Edna Ferber stage play. It shows a cross-section of metropolitan life and unfolds a series of dramas, comedies and tragedies.

This film, which Frances Marion and Herman J. Mankiewicz adapted to the screen, is not only notable for its unusual succession of dramatic climaxes, but also for the fact that each of its stars has an important assignment in the picture.

Marie Dressler, John and Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Billie Burke, Madge Evans, Karen Morley, Jean Hersholt, Phillips Holmes, May Robson, Louise Closser Hale and Cary Grant are members of this cast which George Cukor directed.

News events, a comedy and short subjects are added.

Tense Romance On the Screen At the Rialto

Chester Morris, starring in "King for a Night," supported by Helen Twelvetrees and Alice White, under the direction of Kurt Neumann, opens today at the Rialto Theater.

The picture was written by William Anthony McGuire and among the well-knowns included in the cast are John Miljan, Grant Mitchell, George E. Stone, George Meeker, Warren Hymar and Dorothy Grainger.

"King for a Night" tells a story of glamorous night club life, wherein the son of a clergyman and his sister are caught in the whirlpool and sent hurtling through a series of harrowing and heart-rending situations.

Chester Morris, who has supported many fine film stars in the past, comes into his own as the star of "King for a Night," contributing a performance that surpasses any he has ever done in pictures or on the stage, where he played for 12 years prior to his advent to Hollywood.

The Rialto completes this unusual program with selected shorter screen novelties as well as the latest Universal News, with Graham McNamee as the Talking Reporter.

De Mille Film And Two Stage Aces at Earle

Warner Bros.' Earle Theater, for the week starting tomorrow, offers another seven days of stellar entertainment, with Cecil B. DeMille's newest romance-drama, "Four Frightened People," starring Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, William Gargan and Mary Boland, as the screen feature, and a stage bill headed by Fifi D'Orsay, the Hollywood "it" girl.

"Four Frightened People" is said to have the most unusual plot of any picture produced this season. Adapted from the best-selling novel by E. Arnot Robertson, it tells the story of two men and two women who flee a stricken ship and find themselves in a jungle fraught with unnamed perils.

The stage bill features Fifi D'Orsay, noted star of stage, screen and radio, in a fun program in which she offers a new program of songs and laughs. Other acts will be Ruth Edler and the Reed brothers and Proske's Royal Bengal Tigers.

Short reels, the latest issue of the Graham MacNamee Newsreel and the Earle Orchestral prelude will complete the program.

Splendid Cast Appear in New Keith Booking

RKO-Keith's on Friday will present the latest Irene Dunne starring picture, "If I Were Free," described as a romantic drama. It is the picturization of the successful stage play, "Behold, We Live."

"If I Were Free" is woven around the broken codes of marriage and gives Miss Dunne an excellent vehicle in which Clive Brook, last seen in Washington in "Cavalcade," plays opposite her.

Others in the cast include Nils Asther, Henry Stephenson and Laura Hope Crews. The picture, an RKO-Radio production, was directed by Elliot Nugent.

Keith's subsidiary program includes an unusual subject, "Killers of Chapparel," a camera study that has created a great deal of interest; a mickey Mouse cartoon, "Giantland," and another in the series of revivals of the old-time movies taken when it was first discovered that pictures could actually be made to move, this time, "Helen of the Chorus." Pathe News completes the current program.

He is the husband of the Virginia novelist, Amelie Rives, and has for many years had his home at Castle Hill, near Cobham, Albemarle County.

He is best known as the portrait painter of British and European nobility and statesmen. His pictures of Gladstone hang in two galleries in London and also in Edinburgh. He painted Dr. Philip Alexander Bruce, late historian of the University of Virginia.

Former Envoy Host In Bolivian Mansion

Party Given in Elaborate Home in Mountains Near La Paz by Senor and Senora de Abelli Described in Letter to Washington Friends.

Senor and Senora de Abelli have been away from Washington about a year and have been much missed by their many friends here. Their home at Avacaya, where they spend a part of the year, the spring and summer of the Southern hemisphere, which is the autumn and winter of our part of the world, is one of the show places of that country. Thousands of feet above sea-level in the mountains, and miles from any city, it is one of those rare homes so complete in itself that there is no feeling of being isolated. There are beautiful patios; handsome horses are in the stables; and there are tennis courts and a large swimming pool. The swimming pool is fed by natural warm springs which flow from a higher mountain where the vast tin mines owned by Senor Abelli lie.

The guests at the house party, which lasted from Christmas until after New Year's, included the United States Minister to Bolivia and Mrs. Fay Allen des Portes and their two young sons, Bernard Baruch des Portes and Fay Allen des Portes, jr., the Argentine Minister, Senor Dr. Don Juan Valenzuela; the British Minister, Mr. Richard Nosworthy and Senora Rosa Salinas Begas, who was formerly Senora de la Barra, wife of the one-time Secretary of the Bolivian Legation here. Senora de Begas and Senora de Abelli have been friends for many years.

Senora de Abelli, accompanied by their two children, Crystal and Luis, and her mother, Mrs. G. M. Hyland, of Washington, will leave February 1 for Santiago, Chile, where they will remain several months. Mrs. Hyland has been visiting Senor and Senora de Abelli since last summer.

8,000 Stamps Supplied Daily To President

Flood of White House Mail Stimulates His Hobby.

President Roosevelt, along with many a small boy, waits for the mailman in the morning—figuratively speaking, anyway. For a standing rule at the White House is that every stamp must be detached and saved for the President to mull over and add to his stamp collection if he so desires. With an average of 8,000 letters arriving at the White House daily, the President is in the position of achieving the stamp collector's dream of Paradise regained.

The President's position of A-No. 1 Letter Receiver gives him the run on almost any other stamp collector in the country so far as volume to choose from is concerned.

When he was a little boy of 7, he experienced a small boy's impulse to save stamps. Because his parents were traveling at that time, he had the opportunity of seeing and saving the beautifully colored and designed foreign stamps that he saw his parents put on letters to friends back home.

It is said that while he acted as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, the stamp hobby was revived and Navy men brought him stamps from all over the world. There again he was in a position to be envied by any stamp enthusiast. If he woke up in the middle of the night and remembered that he wanted a certain issue from Timbuctoo or Haiti or Bangkok, he had only to request the stamps from an associate in one of those parts.

During his service as governor of New York State, the President still pursued his hobby for relaxation. Eventually, he found himself swamped with too great a variety and tied down to specialties. Haiti fascinated him, and does to the present time, although he is said, in stamp circles, to have started rather late on the Haiti hunt since early issues constantly become more rare. Haiti is a small country, and its stamps would therefore be rare.

The President is a member of the American Philatelic Society and the Society of Philatelic Americans. Both of these organizations have endorsed the National Stamp Exhibition.

Like the "right good captain of the Pinafore," who counseled landlubbers that by sticking close to their desks and never going to sea, they all might be rulers of the Queen's "Navee," Rear Admiral Frederick R. Harris, U. S. N. Retired, yesterday offered his version of "How to be top man."

One of Admiral Harris's chief interests these days is his world-famous stamp collection, which he is preparing for entry in the National Stamp Exhibition, to be held at Rockefeller Center, New York, February 10 to 18.

At one time, the admiral was interested in collecting Italian stamps. When he gave that up, he presented President Roosevelt with his stamps of Roman States. He first collected as a boy and has continued since except during the World War when he "was too busy."

Montague Sews for Cupid's Victims—Clarepotter for the Carefree Outdoor Girl

Publishing Good Woman's Field, Says Editor

Some fields for women may be overcrowded—but the magazine field is not one of them.

Miss Marion Shear, associate editor of All-Story Magazine, in Washington to speak this evening before the National League of American Pen Women on "Writing Fiction for the Love Magazines," threw out that hopeful hint yesterday to girls in search of an interesting vocation.

"Women are indispensable in the publishing business," this very youthful and attractively feminine editor person told The Post reporter. "And why shouldn't they be?" she added, "when there are so many women readers of magazines? The reason that editorial offices everywhere are full of women readers and editors is that no one can tell what women want to read—like women.

"Women editorial workers are most in demand, of course, on publications that are exclusively for women or children—publications that have a strictly feminine point of view. Big book publishers, such as Macmillan's and Dutton's, have women at the head of their children's departments. And of course the love story publications are almost exclusively in the hands of women.

"But women are even encroaching on fields formerly considered the undisputed territory of men. Women are generally excellent on details, and when they set their minds to learn about some new subject, they are apt to learn all there is to know about it.

"Miss Edythe Seims, editor of three magazines, is one of those who stepped successfully out of the all-feminine field. She set out to learn about aeronautics, because deeply interested and is now an authority on the subject.

"It's a mistaken idea that women can excel only in thinking up new recipes or in dilating on the subject of clothes or in writing about their own feelings. For a time I myself worked on a publication dealing in fact and fiction with railroading, a technical enough subject. It was fascinating work—learning a new language, getting behind the scenes of a great industry in a way not often open to women.

"But, of course, the surest way of advancement for women in publishing is along lines in which the feminine point of view is indispensable. Here a woman can get ahead by being herself. By keeping a finger on the pulse of her own inclinations and tendencies she can judge what millions of other women want to read.

There are women manuscript readers and editorial assistants on practically all the women's magazines of national circulation, Miss Shear observed.

"Probably the greatest success story of all is that of Catherine McNelis, who is the head of Tower Magazines," she said.

"It's history, now, how she sold the idea to Woolworth's of distributing magazines through their countrywide stores. Having secured this splendid, brand-new field of distribution, she was able to get financial backing for the four magazines which she now publishes.

"So there really are no limits to what women can do in publishing. They may start as filing clerks, or stenographers, or subeditors, but they may end up as full-fledged editors or even as publishers."

Bath Towl Gowns.

Paris (AP).—Bath towel evening gowns are "something to write home about." Lanvin makes them of white cotton toweling material with a deep bertha collar and a train. The fabric is a soft material with a rather rough finish which falls in soft lines about the figure.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

The Price.

"How much will it cost?" asked the business man,
For buying is done on a careful plan,
And the price is important. Lest money be lost,
To the penny a merchant must reckon the cost
And "yes" to the salesman he'll seldom say
If he thinks it is more than he ought to pay.

He'll ask in advance ere the deal be made
Over how many months must the bill be paid.
No paper he'll sign without reading it through,
For that is the sensible thing to do,
And his books will show to the final cent
For just what wares was his money spent.

Well, Pleasure's a salesman with wares to sell,
But the cost of its goods it will seldom tell.
The stuff is gaudy and bright to see,
But to buy them blindly a fool is he,
For the price of a thrill which but cheap appears
May be sorrow and heartache that last for years.

Question the salesman! Lest all be lost,
See if the pleasure be worth its cost.
Look the goods over as merchants do.
Read the fine print in the contract through,
And be sure ere you barter your life away
The thrill is worth all that you'll have to pay.

Metal Threads Woven in New Bridal Gowns

And a Silver Pinhead Dot Ornaments a Dull White Crepe.

Paris, Jan. 18.—The vogue of metal threads woven with crepes in very delicate touches seems to be now extending to bridal dresses. At a very fashionable wedding that took place recently at the St. Honore d'Eylau Church, the bride wore a dress in dull white crepe, with an imperceptible silver dot in pinhead effect.

The bodice showed very puffed sleeves and the bride wore a tiny muff entirely composed of wild roses in satin and velvet, matching a garland of the same flowers disposed in diagonal effect across the bodice. The little flower girls were dressed in pale blue satin, with long, stiff skirts and close-fitted bonnets in deep blue velvet. The little pages wore costumes with long trousers in the same velvet. The bridesmaids were dressed in pale blue crepe, with hats and shoes in brown antelope, matching their mink capelets.

Black dresses enhanced with yokes, scarfs and full sleeves in vivid colors, especially in emerald green, were quite in evidence. Of particular interest was a dress in rosy beige amorosa, the skirt of which was made entirely of volants disposed in spiral effect. This dress was accompanied by a short mink bolero and muff, and the last touch of smartness was given by a panne velvet toque in a lovely shade of modore (brown), which was draped over the wearer's head, giving an effect of height, enhanced by a touch of natural paradise plumes.

Governor Invites President.

Richmond, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—George C. Peery, Virginia's new governor, has invited President and Mrs. Roosevelt to occupy a special box at the opening of the opera festival here next week. The invitation was extended to the President by Sencommunicated to the President by Senator Harry Flood Byrd.

Mrs. Jenckes Wars on Flood Peril

By Frances Mangum.

When the Wabash River overflowed its banks in the memorable flood of 1927 it swept Representative Virginia E. Jenckes, of Indiana, before the public eye.

Mrs. Jenckes previously was a private citizen interested in rearing her daughter, interested in the farming of her lands, and like everyone else in that flood-stricken area, interested in subduing the Wabash and White Rivers, which yearly broke through their weak leeves, causing millions of dollars of damage to property and taking thousands of lives.

Came one morning in 1927. All night long the rain had fallen unceasingly.

"It seemed as though half the ocean were pouring down upon us," declared Mrs. Jenckes, as she sat in her office yesterday in the House Office Building, recounting the dramatic experience. Her iron-gray hair, piled high on her head, was a charming contrast to her dark oxford-gray wool dress. She wore a gardenia pinned on her shoulder and fingered one of the carnations in the large bouquet on her desk. When she spoke there was an excited tremor in her voice.

Confronting Tragedy.

"My daughter, Virginia, and I were seated at the breakfast table when a workman came dashing down the driveway. He pushed open the front door and literally bounded into the dining room.

"River's risin'! Levy's breakin'! he managed between breaths.

"I knew immediately the terrible disaster which threatened us. In a fraction of a second a picture flashed across my mind of the workers' cottages swept before an enrush of waters, small, helpless children crying out as they cling to floating debris, horses and cows struggling frantically against the current.

"Virginia and I grabbed our coats and ran out of the house. Fortunately our little red flivver was standing out front. We jumped into it and tore down the road, collecting workmen, warning families, assembling all the hands in the neighborhood.

Three-Day Struggle.

"That was Thursday morning about 6 o'clock. I didn't leave the levee until late Saturday when we had it pretty well strengthened with sand bags. They say a woman isn't any good in a crisis or an emergency, but it isn't so. The men there were looking to me for moral strength, for encouragement, just as I was looking to them to perform the actual manual labor.

"We saved the levee and all the homes and fields in that immediate vicinity but it was only through almost unbelievable labor."

After Mrs. Jenckes' wonderful work during the flood she received letters from people all over the State congratulating her and asking for her help and influence in flood control activitels. Finally she was asked to run for Congress and to seek Federal aid for the Wabash-White River drainage area.

$18,000,000 Grant Asked.

Since the first session of the Seventy-third Congress in March, Mrs. Jenckes has been indefatigable in fostering interest in flood control. She drew up a petition which is before the President now pointing out that the area of her home district is the center of the population of the United States, and that over $2,000,000 damage is done there each year by floods. Mrs. Jenckes asks for a flood control grant of $18,000,000 out of the $3,300,000,000 set aside in the recovery act for public works and construction projects.

"The flood control project is just one of my pets," remarked Mrs. Jenckes. "There are the veterans, of course. I shall never forget the day a group of them came to my office and said they wouldn't go to Camp Hunt because the liason committee included Emanuel Levin, an avowed Communist.

"I had to go down to the park, and figuratively 'mount a soap box' to persuade them it was better to go than to spend any more cold, hungry nights on the cinder piles. You know what I did? I took a menu of the food served ot Camp Hunt and read it to them. 'If you will go on out there,' I told them, 'this is what you'll have tomorrow.' Poor things! They were so hungry they couldn't withstand that. Isn't that just what a woman would do?" she laughed. "If it had been a man he might have given them eloquence by the hour and still not have achieved results."

Fire Department Probe.

Mrs. Jenckes, as a member of the District of Columbia Committee in the House, has been working assiduously to rectify ostensible evils in the present District of Columbia Fire Department.

"It came to my attention quite by chance," she said, "that many firemen were being fined outrageous sums for trivial misdemeanors. I started investigating the situation and have uncovered quite a nest of injustice. Recently I had my attorney, Paul E. Jamieson, draw up a list of charges which I have presented to the District Committee and have sent to the affiliated organizations of the Federation of Citizens Associations."

Mrs. Jenckes said she liked to have her finger in a lot of pies because it seemed to her that there was just so much to be done it would take a lot of fingers and a lot of pies to do it.

Hawaiian Table Is Presented To First Lady

It Is Gift of Mrs. N. S. Scott, Prominent in D. A. R. Activity in Islands.

A recent present to the White House is a table of Hawaiian mahogany made by hand and nearly 100 years old.

It was brought from Hawaii and presented to Mrs. Roosevelt by Mrs. N. S. Scott, long a resident in the islands, but now spending the winter in Washington.

Mrs. Roosevelt was most gracious in receiving it and remarked that she was tremendously interested because of her own shop for handwork.

The complete history of the table is not known, but it was doubtless made for one of the early missionaries and was in Mrs. Scott's home 44 years.

The President's wife said it would be placed in the sitting-room upstairs with other historic furniture. She also accepted and at once put on a silk Hawaiian lei so characteristic of the "Paradise of the Pacific."

Mrs. Scott, who has been both chapter and State regent of the D. A. R. for the islands is sure that Aloha Chapter and Honolulu generally will feel honored that this piece of furniture has found an abiding place in the First of American homes.

Bonnet, Beret, Bowler Arrive To Greet Spring

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Away off the face are the new spring hats—sometimes as far back as two inches from the hairline.

And in style they're as refreshing as the first glimpse of green in Central Park. In Lily Dache's collection about five main types were seen today—all lively and different.

First, there's the bonnet, important this spring for the first time since prewar days. Katharine Hepburn aided in bringing it back. But as this designer creates it, it's an 1840 bonnet, like Mme. Bovary's.

Mme. Bovary is almost the greatest single millinery influence right now. But other important hats from this designer's collection are the Breton sailor, the bowler, a new beret, and a dashing "desperado" hat.

The Breton sailor, which turns up all around, she makes in straw or stitched straw cloth. Sometimes she faces the brim with bright imported silk. Then it is worn with a matching scarf, which ties saucily in front.

The bowler it a little hat of the English type, very shallow and small, sometimes tilted over one eye. It exposes one entire side of the hair. This designer makes it in dark straw to wear with suits, and also in white pique, for wear with pique-trimmed evening dresses.

Each season the beret comes back with a new trick. This spring it's a "windblown" straw. It has a pleated flange on the right side that sweeps down and almost conceals the cheek. The other side is entirely exposed.

This forward movement, combined with off-the-face effects and the use of straw are the main new millinery trends.

The "desperado" or "bravado" hat, which will be seen with new silk suits, is an off-the-face hat which also has width. It has an irregular big brim that sweeps across the face and turns up in front.

The First Is a Runaway Deb; The Second a Sportswoman

Renee Montague Surprised Her Virginia Family When She Succeeded in a Career; Clarepotter Was Surprised Herself at Her Flair for Dress.

Beautiful clothes are only beautiful if they are chosen to suit every occasion and for each hour of the day. That's why many of the great specialists prefer to stick to one particular line. With one it may be designs for bridal gowns—with another bathing suits. And in every case, if the work comes from the hand of a master of haute couture, the result may be summed up in the one word, glamour.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

The dulcet tones of the Mendelssohn wedding march mean considerably more than orange blossoms and fluttering bridesmaids to a fragile looking young woman named Renee Montague. That particular music means money to her as four out of five fashionable brides have their gowns and those of their attendants designed by Miss Montague, known to her friends in New York as Mickey Mouse.

In a similar manner, the sound of a tennis racquet smacking a ball, or the sight of a wet figure lolling on the beach, warms the cockles of Mrs. Clare Potter's heart. She knows that if the tennis player or swimmer has a flair for clothes, she is most likely wearing sports attire designed by Mrs. Potter.

Miss Montague's creative activities are not limited to brides. She has costumed several shows and first won recognition with an ingenious scene for the 1931 edition of the Ziegfeld Follies. She also makes distinguished street, afternoon and evening attire for the important New York shop that employes her as head designer. But brides have an especial appeal for her. She says it is much more fun to work out a whole scene consisting of the wedding gown and frocks for the bridesmaids and other attendants than it is to make just a single dress for one woman to wear here and there.

Born in Virginia.

Renee Montague was born in Staunton, Va., to a family prominent in social and political affairs. Her father's cousin, Jack Montague, is a member of Congress. Renee, a pale sprite with dark eyes and hair, attended Gunston Hall in Washington, where she studied violin and piano, and then made her debut at the traditional and famous St. Cecilia Ball in Charleston, considered the most exclusive affair of its kind in America.

But little Miss Montague wasn't interested in society. She was bored with teas, dinners, dances, and the seemingly endless whirl that envelopes all good little debutantes. The Montagues were finally convinced that their Renee was in earnest about wanting to design clothes. After that it was comparatively easy for her to persuade them to send her to the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts.

The family tried not to feel too badly about it. Sketching could safely be considered a ladylike occupation. They thought themselves fortunate that the sprite with dark, eager eyes had not chosen the chorus or torch singing. Besides, a few months of hard work in art school would undoubtedly show her the error of her ways and would make her realize that a debutante's life is a rather pleasant and exciting affair.

A Good Scholar.

The family were mistaken. Renee worked like a little demon for three years at the School of Fine and Applied Arts. Then she went to Paris for a year of study. When she returned to New York she found a job with an obscure theatrical costumer. One day she would design wicked and spangled brevities for a burlesque show. The next day she would make glamorous period costumes for a musical comedy.

This was the finest training in the world for an ambitious designer, according to Miss Montague. After several months with the obscure costuming establishment, the little Southerner was commissioned to create the clothes worn by Billie Burke in "The Marquise."

That was in 1929. Since that time she has made stage costumes for Alice Brady in "Mamselle," for Clare Luce and Louella Gear in "The Gay Divorce," and for Tamara Geva in "The Divine Drudge." She has also done things for Dorothy Stone, Hope Williams, Joan Bennett and Miriam Hopkins, in addition to designing the off-stage wardrobe of Sidney Fox and creating Mrs. Pierpont Hamilton's costume for the Tuxedo Ball. Her time is now almost completely taken up with creating clothes for the important New York store where she is head designer.

Pleasing Everybody.

Designing for the stage is a difficult business, Miss Montague has found. There are so many people to please—the temperamental star, the harassed producer, the opinionated director—even the playwright thinks he should have his say in the matter of what his characters are to wear. Brides are less complicated. With the exception of their mothers, no one tries to tell them what they should wear and no one tries to superintend the designer's work.

Her Wooden Doll.

This young couturiere from Virginia makes rough sketches, then cuts and drapes the chosen material on an 18-inch wooden doll called Poupinella. After Poupinella has been dressed, her costume is made full size in crinoline by the employes of the workroom and Miss Montague fits the crinoline version on a live model, by draping, adjusting and arranging.

She has a childlike affection for Poupinella, speaks of the doll as if it were alive and often talks of it, although Poupinella maintains a discreet silence.

Several years ago the Montagues moved from Virginia to Forest Hills, Long Island, and Renee makes her home with them. The family has become quite interested in her work. "I guess your family is always interested when you are a success," says Miss Montague with an impish grin.

Clarepotter for Sports.

What Renee Montague is to brides, Mrs. Clare Potter is to the sportswoman. She is one of the very brightest stars in a field in which the American designer undisputedly excels the French couturiere. Mrs. Potter, or Clarepotter, as she is known professionally, believes that one reason for her success in creating sports clothes is that she herself is a sportswoman. She takes her tennis seriously and is now trying to persuade horses to take her seriously. Some day, according to Clarepotter, she will ride just as well as she swims, which is superbly.

Here is a designer who didn't spend her childhood making fancy clothes for dolls or remodeling the family's millinery. She had slight interest in clothes during her girlhood and dreamed of becoming a great painter. But, after she had studied at the Art Students League, in New York, she realized that she would never be anything more than a mediocre artist, and she hated mediocrity.

Glorified Beach Attire.

She found her metier in glorifying the attire worn at smart country clubs, exclusive beaches, and fashionable athletic matches. Because she likes to change her own type and appearance frequently, she has made clothes that enable other women to do the same thing. Last summer she designed two startling bathing suits. One was sleek, glistening black and made the wearer look like an eel if she were slender and a seal if she were not. The other bathing suit, white and shaggy, was decidedly polar-bearish in appearance.

Clarepotter prefers dresses that have no buttons nor snaps but are yanked on over the head. When she does use buttons they are made of all sorts of queer materials and are cut in amusing shapes. Her color combinations are distinctly unusual and are made up of off-shades in most cases. She doesn't waste time in drawing sketches but whacks right into the material although she is adept in drafting and other technical phases of dressmaking. The popularity of black linen last summer is credited to her. Recently she launched "baby pants," trimly knitted shorts, which sportswomen are flaunting at resort beaches and on Southern cruises.

When she is not busily making sports clothes in the New York shop that employes her, Clarepotter is at her farm in Rockland County, N. Y., where she raises dogs and engages in a variety of sports. She has been designing for the last three years and says that she has only begun.

Read in tomorrow's Woman's Page another of the stories of the world's great dressmakers.

A Deb Who Went Arty

After making her debut at the St. Cecilia Ball in Charleston, the most exclusive affair of its kind in America, Renee Montague turned up her diminutive nose at society and spent three arduous years at art school, learning to become a dress designer. Now many important brides march down the middle aisle in Montague gowns.

Threading Needles Is Latest Masculine Sport in Seattle

Seattle, Jan. 18 (AP).—The war is on in Seattle sewing circles tonight, and a Denver man was the cause of it all because he advertised he had run 18 threads through the eye of a needle.

Then M. V. Ryder, of South Tacoma, sent in a needle threaded with 75 threads. And if it had stopped there, it would have been all right.

But Art Lanigan put 77 threads through the eye of his needle. Anton Oquist threaded 95. P. J. Parris, using his already noted wet-thumb twirl, threaded 100 in less than 15 minutes and claimed a world's record.

Other candidates now are fighting over the various approach forcing systems and there's no telling where it will end.

A Sports Girl Who Sews

Clarepotter, when not engaged in whacking out amusing garments that set the styles at country clubs and fashionable beaches, gallops over her farm near New York on her favorite mount or romps with her beloved Dalmatians. The designer attributes much of her success in creating sports clothes to the fact that she, herself, is a sportswoman.

Perfume Prince Creates Tricky Bath Auxiliary

Chromium Ball Has Its Uses in Wardrobe and Boudoir, Too.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

From far over the seas came a prince to make his home in New York. His interest in heiresses was soon apparent, but strange to say he did not seem to be matrimonially inclined. He went everywhere, met everybody, and made friends in as many circles as he could. And then, all at once he startled the fatshionable world by bringing out a new perfume. And after that, a new powder. And as the years went on more and more new things.

His interest in heiresses stood him in good stead, for they drove up to the door of his shop and bought and bought and told friends about the prince, and the friends came and bought, too. Just as it got to be a habit among his clientele to watch from week to week to see what the prince's next new thing would be, so it became a habit with the prince to invent novelties, usually along lines of most interest to women.

Occasionally some of his more startling inventions find their way into Washington. Just recently his perfume ball arrived.

Perfumed Baths.

It looks exactly like a Titan tea ball, but it does the most miraculous things. We can hang it up in the shower under the running water, or alongside where the steam will seep in, and take a scented shower bath! Or we can swish it through the tubful of water a couple of times and give a delightful fragrance to the bath. Or we can hang it in the closet and let the scent spread lazily into the air and perfume all our wardrobe.

The perfume ball, large shiny chromium thing that it is, is bought along with a small bottle of special essence which the prince highly recommends for use in the ball. However, he tells us, if we have a favorite perfume we'd rather use, the ball works just as well with that.

Imagine having an honest to goodness prince to thank for a perfumed shower bath! We wonder what next.

Bargains All at $5.

January clearance sales are exciting events if we know where to look for real buys. A shop on Connecticut avenue has set aside a table full of trinkets, and every single one of them regardless of the former price is selling for $5. It's well worth looking into. There's an ornate brass cigarette box lined with mahogany, a red leather writing case which used to be $12, a lady's cigarette case of black suede, marquisite trimmed, formerly $10, a sterling silver combination cigarette tray and ashtray, formerly $8.50.

A gift shop hidden away in the spacious lobby of a Washington hotel has some of the most convenient-looking, voluminous hand bags we've seen since grandmother used to arrive at the station with her own handknitted.

For elderly ladies who like to travel in comfort and carry a bag which will hold a dozen more things than most bags, and which will outlive nine out of ten of any other kind, one of these chenille bags on display here will be a delightful gift. They come in many dark colors with large wooden frame tops.

Lighted Fishbowls.

The idea for illuminated aquariums built to hang on the wall originated, so they say, along the Riviera. Rumor has it that a wealthy Turkish gentleman built a most unusual dwelling which boasted such things as indoor gardens, sunken pools, doors with silver and golden gratings, and these unique wall aquariums.

Whether rumor is merely rumor or based on fact, it is undeniably true that the aquariums are enchanting. A Washington shop has them in a variety of sizes. Most of them are about a foot high and a foot and a half long. The glass oblong bowls are held in wrought iron frames which fasten against the wall. Tops which fit over the glass conceal little lights which illuminate the water and the fish. They were designed to hold tropical fish, for which the warmth from the light keeps the water at a healthy temperature.

The shop sells the aquariums, but not the fish, sand, rocks, plants and trimmings.

There's a store downtown which not only makes a specialty of rearing the finest, healthiest tropical fish this side of the equator, but of telling you how to rear them at home. And not only that but of helping you decorate your aquarium to be a real work of art. It pays to have it this way, for if they're attractive enough they make the loveliest sidelights imaginable for hall or sun porch.

"Dead Leaf" New Color.

Paris (AP).—Princess Amedee de Broglie wears a coat in a new shade called "dead leaf" (a rich henna brown). The coat, designed by Eliana Mary, is trimmed with skunk dyed the same tint as the fabric.

Morning—After Rain.

By Katherine Smith.

Grey-spun locks of haggard rain
Shake around the face of night;
Trembling, with quaking pain;
Quivering, as pity might.

Grey-gold clouds of dawn have brought Threads of light for Earth to wear.
Brushing past the night, she caught
Tangled mist-dreams in her hair.

Insanity's the Garlic of Art —Saint-Gaudens

Son of Famed Sculptor Reassures That Artists Do Have Brains.

Philadelphia, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Contemporary Club, despite the caliber of its talent, has failed to find the answer to the question, "Art, Sane or Insane?"

"What garlic is to the salad, insanity is to art," explained Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts of the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, Pa., and a son of the famous sculptor, Augustus Saint-Gaudens.

"My father once said," remarked Saint-Gaudens, "that artists have the same brains as other people, but that they are over at one side of the head, sticking out like a bump."

Becoming more serious, Saint-Gaudens asserted that art is not truly a form of insanity, but is prone to attacks which give observers a misleading impression.

It all depends on the times, he said. When conditions are happy and serene, so is art; if turmoil and confusion prevail, art seeks to reflect them.

Not so, said Albert Sterner, well known portrait painter.

"Art should try to stem the ugly tendencies in social disorders," Sterner asserted. "The artist should strive to express an idea that is clear to the least informed layman."

R. Tait McKenzie, distinguished sculptor, had a kind word for all artists, but Thornton Oakley, professor in the school of the Pennsylvania Museum, covered his eyes to shut out the "horrors of some of the modern exhibitions."

It was too much for the club. The members still are pondering the question: "Art, sane or insane?"

New Lamps Made For Looks Only

Average Room Nowadays Is Dimly Lighted.

The new lamp prices read like fairy tales, but it's like searching a haystack to find a shade you can see through. As far as that goes, maybe people are tired of seeing things anyway.

The average room is so dimly lighted, it's a tough job to figure out whether the newcomer in the room is carrying his silk hat or a hutch of rabbits. And then dozens of folks are still wed to the candle-for-dining romance. But providing you like lamps in your home just to look at, and not see by, the shops are full of grand values.

Some complete lamps—shade and all—are available at $2 or $3, and the makers have actually considered period and modern requirements in their designs.

Father Coughlin, at Hearing, Scores Birth Control

Criminal for Catholics and Dangerous for Nation, He Declares.

In Keeping With Repeal, Representative Pierce Answers.

By Elizabeth Young.

The Pierce bill for legalizing dissemination of birth control information by physicians and clinics was vigorously attacked yesterday afternoon before the House Judiciary Committee by Farther Charles E. Coughlin, militant Catholic lecturer of Detroit.

Thirty minutes before adjournment of the first day's hearing to get the bill out of committee, after a dozen proponents had spoken in its favor, the idol of millions of radio fans throughout the country appeared to present the opposition viewpoint.

Bad Politics.

"It is criminal so far as the Catholic Church is concerned to advocate birth control," Father Coughlin declared. "However, I understand 63 per cent of the population of this country professes no affiliation with any religion. They, perhaps, are free to practice birth control if that's their morality. It's their business. But if I were a Christian father, I would resent my Congress legislating in favor of such a practice."

"To uncriminalize the dissemination of birth control information is to make the United States lose its Anglo-Saxon and Celtic majority. It is bad politics. Other races in the United States are not practicing birth control."

Mrs. Rufus Gibbs, of Baltimore, claimed the committee's attention for a few minutes following Father Coughlin's talk. Introducing herself as a representative of "a large portion of American motherhood," with four children of her own, she scored birth control proponents and their methods as inimical to morality and reticence.

Debauching Youth.

"It is time Congress took a firm stand against a final step of the kind proposed in this bill," she said. "In pagan days it was a capital offense to debauch youth."

Earlier in the day, however, Mrs. Thomas N. Hepburn, wife of a Hartford, Conn., surgeon and mother of the actress, Katharine Hepburn, had characterized as "nonsense" the suggestion that legalized birth control tends to race suicide.

With knowledge of birth control methods at her disposal, she has six children, she told the committee.

"Women want children," she said. "But they want children they can properly take care of, physically and economically. The simple basic fact is that women have a strong maternal instinct and almost all women want to get married if possible. For these reasons, the charge is ridiculous that passage of this bill would lead to race suicide."

Mrs. Hepburn, legislative chairman of the National committee for federal legislation on birth control, and Mrs. Margaret Sanger, president, were presented to the Judiciary Committee by Representative Walter Pierce (Democrat), of Oregon.

In Keeping With Repeal.

Representative Pierce, sponsor of the debated legislation, and former Governor of Oregon, declared for amendment of existing antibirth control sections of the criminal code as "in keeping with the repeal of prohibition."

"The bootleg traffic today in birth-control information is astounding," he said. "There's hardly a high school boy or girl who doesn't know more about the question than you committee members who sit at this table."

He said he was the father of six children, and "the proud grandfather of seven grandsons."

Auburn-haired Mrs. Sanger, slight and smart in a green wool dress and small-brimmed hat, made a similar appeal for revision of Federal law which prohibits dissemination of birth-control information.

"There are 47 States in the Union in which physicians may give birth-control information as they see fit," she said. "One hundred and fifty-seven clinics are legally operating in this country. Yet they have to bootleg supplies from New York or Chicago in order to adequately care for their patients."

She told of having received more than a million pleading letters—"I stopped counting after the millionth one," she said—from overburdened young mothers of large families, asking advice on spacing their children.

"Such mothers should have the right to such information," she said. "Yet it is a crime, punishable by five years' imprisonment or a $5,000 fine, to give such information through the mail, or to advise them of the location of the nearest physician or clinic that might help them.

"But the law today gives no exemption. It isn't civilized. We should be able to tell such a mother where to go. We should be happy to have her asking how to help herself and her children."

She cited two such letters, one from the 21-year-old mother of six children, the youngest of whom is three months; the other from a 34-year-old mother who has borne 12 children, only three of whom are living.

Prof. James H. S. Bossard, sociologist with the University of Pennsylvania, urged favorable action on the bill for economic reasons, declaring that society owes something to taxpayers and contributors as well as to its dependent members.

"Since 1929 there have been great increases in all kinds of expense for public relief," he said. "The increase has been geometric each year since then. The relief burden in 1930 was twice that of 1929; that of 1931 twice that of 1930; and that of 1932 twice that of the preceding year. It is probable that 1933 will carry forward that same geometric ratio. And while the relief expenditures have been increasing, the taxpayers' regular annual expenses have been going on as usual."

Birth control as a checkmate to a rising mortality rate from criminal operations was urged by Dr. Fred J. Taussig, professor of obstetrics and gynecology of the Washington University of St. Louis.

"Increase in this evil is noted primarily in families of the poor with over three children," he said. "Only three out of every seven cases occur among unmarried mothers. Control of the problem of such criminal practices by legislation and prosecution has failed in every land. The only way to meet it is through birth control."

Dr. James L. McCartney, psychiatrist of Elmira Reformatory, pronounced "large and unwanted families a major factor in causing crime."

"The first, second and third children in large families account for 63 per cent of criminals," he said. "Eighty-eight per cent of their parents are tradesmen or laborers who have had to love on a low economic scale. Twenty per cent of the mothers work outside the home."

Birth control was hailed as the salvation of marriage by Rabbi Edward L. Israel, of Baltimore, chairman of the Commission on Social Justice, of the Central Conference of American Rabbis.

"Marriage must have a spiritual unity and beauty which can only exist whtn there is compatibility and freedom from worry," he said. "Birth control will abolish immorality and make for early marriage. I believe the indiscriminate breeding of men to be against God-given intelligence. Advocates of birth control desire the opportunity to use their intelligence without becoming law violators."

Men's Lounge Suits Nowadays Are Easy Fitting With Natural Shoulders, No Padding

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Jan. 19.—Winter visitors to New York's University and Metropolitan Clubs, or the rooms of the Princeton, Yale and Harvard Clubs, or Chicago's Saddle & Cycle Club, are struck by a thing that's common to all these places—the air of comfort and ease that's there. And not a little of it is due to the easy-fitting suits so many of these club men wear these days. Suits well named 'lounge" suits by their makers and their wearers.

Don't think these lounge suits have anything sloppily informal about them. Because there are few suits a man can wear that dress him up as neatly and as comfortably.

One reason for this is that they're designed on an entirely new principle: the idea that what a man wants above all things in his suit is freedom of action and comfort in every motion.

Natural Shoulders.

That's why the suits of men-of-action like Henry Morgenthau, jr., Ambassador Bullitt, Liquor Commissioner Joseph Choate, and others—have padless shoulders.

A lounge suit's shoulders conform absolutely to the shoulder lines of the man who wears it. No distortion. And if his shoulders aren't handsome, they're at least comfortable.

These lounge suits are also distinguished by the easy drape of their backs. Never high-waisted. Nor low-waisted. Nor wasp-waisted. But a natural drape . . . stright from the shoulders to the hips.

And the chests—in fact the entire fronts of these suits—carry out the same idea. Without canvas interlining. Or built-in padding and shaping features.

Three Good Models

There are three good models of the lounge suit. The first is two-buttoned, single - breasted, notch lapelled.

Next, the double-breasted lounge model that goes big with bankers and professional men.

Third, the three-button single-breasted, which, by many signs, is making a comeback. And which, incidentally, lends itself particularly well to lounge-suit construction.

Clothes of the types described are available in Washington in all the better class shops and department stores.

If you're from Missouri, and really want to put a lounge suit to the test, here's how it's done: roll one of them up in a bundle; sit on it; stick it under the mattress for the night; go out the next day for a stiff walk in it (even through a pelting rain). And you'll find that while it's wrinkled and out of press, it isn't out of shape.

Add this to the fact that you'll both look and feel well in a lounge suit, and you know why men are cheering this new, up-and-coming fashion.

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

If January 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 1:45 to 2:45 p. m. and from 10 to 11 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 8 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 7:15 to 8:15 p. m.

If you were born on January 19, you love to dominate everyone with whom you are thrown in close contact. You are predisposed to attract attention to yourself by, at all times, wanting to be the center of attraction, regardless whether it is at home or in a public place. It might be well for you to cultivate that habit of sometimes "taking a back seat," and not intruding your personality or ideas—so freely. Unless you are careful in voicing your opinions on this date, it is possible you will find yourself involved in an argument.

The child born on January 19, when it reaches adolescence, most likely will amaze you with its intellectuality. It may be advisable for you to watch carefully that it does not become too self-opinionated. You will be wise also to see it does not become self-centered. This child will always be a leader in its youth, among children, and upon reaching maturer years, in civic or political bodies. Encouragement will bring forth excellent elocutionary powers, and, as it grows older, it will possess all the essential qualifications to be very successful as a public speaker.

If you are a woman, and born on January 19, you have all the attributes supposed to be possessed by the fortunates who have kissed the Blarney Stone. Your inclination to be vain is your principal fault. Men will always appreciate your charms, and you may never be fearful of their not being ready to be of service whenever it is possible. Your married happiness will be in proportion to the amount of effort you personally put forth. Your husband will be deeply in love with you, and will earnestly strive to gratify your every reasonable wish.

If you are a man and born on January 19, you are of a restless disposition, due largely to not being satisfied as to the amount of money you are receiving for your work. Try and curb this feeling of dissatisfaction. If you do, it is possible the peace of mind you will experience will be reflected in your work, and ultimately may bring the financial results you wish. Try to remember, a contented workman is a happy and prosperous man.

People born on January 19 may secure a great deal of contentment by realizing that their desire to secure a greater abundance of worldly goods frequently prevents their fully appreciating what they have already. Stop worrying. Your financial problems are not serious.

Successful people born on January 19:

Isaiah Thomas, journalist.

Pierre Choteau, pioneer.

Ball Hughes, sculptor.

Robert E. Lee, Confederate general.

Edgar Allan Poe, poet.

William Watson, scientist and engineer.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

The great majority of the cases of halitosis are due to absorption of odoriferous gases from the digestive tract. The gases absorbed there are carried by the blood to the great organ for the excretion of waste gases—the lungs. To a limited extent the skin helps the lungs to rid the blood of odoriferous substances. Most of the substances possessed of odors are found in the breath, or expired air. A small proportion of them are found in the liquid and more or less solid excretions of some of the skin glands.

When we speak of halitosis we have in mind the odors borne by the breath. These are due to chemical products absorbed almost wholly from a few feet of the digestive tract, beginning about the ileocecal valve located near the appendix and ending in the vicinity of the sigmoid flexure.

This sector of the digestive tract includes the cecum, the hepatic flexure, the splenic flexure, the ascending and transverse colon, and the descending colon as far as the sigmoid. This sigmoid is located on the left side between the hip and the navel region. The chemical changes that take place beyond the sigmoid are principally bacterial and they result in a different set of odors. Those that take place above the appendix region are not apt to be absorbed in amounts sufficient to give odors to the breath.

If we are to prevent the most frequent forms of halitosis the effort must be to change somewhat the chemistry of the contents of this part of the digestive tract.

The odors of the gases responsible for halitosis belong to a group that is loosely called ethereal or aromatic. The odor is sweetish, something like that of chloroform, but quite different—something like that of the breath in acidosis, but, again, quite different from it.

To some the odor is pleasant; to others quite unpleasant. The odor of the most prized perfumes is quite closely akin to odors that are very offensive. In fact, our likes and dislikes in odors are largely a matter of custom, social law, recollection of past experiences, and personal preferences.

In the production of these odors bacteria do not play the principal role. Choice of foods is even more of a factor in changing the odoriferous gases than is the bacterial content of the tract in that area.

Washes are of service in cleansing the mouth and in perfuming the breath. It is all right to use them for that purpose. But an effort should be made to change the basic cause.

Early Virginia Records Kept Intact by D. A. R.

Martinsville, Va., Jan. 18 (AP). Old records of the State, of material value in the restoration of ancient structures and their maintenance, are being preserved, it was pointed out today, largely through the activities of chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Charles B. Keesee, State regent, in a recent address urged that the task of preserving records be made a foremost endeavor of the organization.

She outlined other D. A. R. activities, including contributions to the maintenance of Kenmore, home of Betty Washington; to Pohick Church, in which George Washington worshiped and served as a vestryman, and to Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria, and work in Yorktown.

The Family Marketer

Oysters Bundled in Crisp, Fried Crust Provoke Diners' Interest.

Let us consider the oyster today. Not only the raw oyster or the stewed or scalloped oyster, because all these are dull from repetition.

Let us, rather, pluck the oyster from his shell and dress him with ingenuity. For when an oyster gets dressed up he is a truly tempting morsel, as the Walrus knew, on that memorable day when he and the Carpenter made away with an oyster school. But if an oyster must be awakened from his peaceful bed and dragged to the dinner table, he will do his disappearing act with much more poise if he is well attired.

Oysters, Fried Supreme.

12 large oysters
1 tablespoon butter
1 slice onion
1 sprig parsley
4 tablespoons flour
1 cup strained oyster liquor
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash cayenne
Dash grated nutmeg
½ cup minced chicken or veal
4 egg yolks, beaten
½ cup cream

Parboil oysters in some of their own liquor, drain and dry. Melt butter in sauce pan, add flour, onion, parsley and cook thoroughly. Add oyster liquor, seasoning and chicken. Cook until thick, add egg yolks and cream, stir over low flame so that mixture will not boil, for 10 minutes. Dip oysters into mixture, place on buttered tin with a space between, cover with remaining mixture, chill. When very cold cut apart, shape, roll in crumbs, brush with egg, roll again in crumbs and fry.

Oyster rolls are delicious for a supper menu, and should be served with a light salad.

Oyster Rolls.

6 small French rolls
1 pint oysters
½ teaspoon salt
Dash cayenne
½ cup hot cream
1 teaspoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon anchovy paste.

Cut a thick slice from one side of each roll, remove inside and spread with butter. Remove hard muscle from oysters, parboil in their own liquor 1 minute, drain. Add remaining ingredients, fill rolls with mixture, close the hole with slices of rolls, brush with melted butter, place in moderate oven for 10 minutes or until heated through. Serve very hot.

Virginia Parts Sadly With "Vice Governor"

Richmond, Jan. 18 (AP).—Virginia has lost a person who has been called by some the "vice governor" to four administrations in which she served as executive secretary to the governors. She is Mrs. John Garland Pollard. She is still known to a host of friends as "Miss Mac." Before her marriage to Gov. Pollard last summer she was Miss Violet Elizabeth MacDougall.

"I'll be back," were her parting words as she and her husband, who four years ago was "the new boss," left for Washington, where they will reside at the Mayflower.

A Tangled Web.

When a player embarks upon a course in bidding designed to fool his opponents, he must carry it through to the end if the tangled web of deception is to prove effective. Mr. Walter L. Pate, of New York, sent me the hand below, in which he held the South cards, and in the course of the bidding of which he used the Overcall in the suit bid by the opponents designed to show control of the first round, even though he held a card in the suit. The final result was a Grand Slam contract which was made because the opponent charged with the burden of leading elected to open another suit rather than risk what appeared to be a certain ruff on the first round. It must be admitted that Mr. Pate's strategy was very fine. To be sure, in the making of the bid he risked a laydown Small Slam in reaching for the Grand one, but inasmuch as West had supported East's bid of one heart there was a solid groundwork for the ruse. The hand and bidding was:

East, Dealer.

	♠ Q 10 7 4 ♡ J 6 2 ◇ 5 3 ♣ J 5 4 2
♠ 8 ♡ K Q 7 5 ◇ 10 7 6 2 ♣ Q 9 6 3	N W E S	♠ 5 2 ♡ A 10 8 4 3 ◇ 9 ♣ A K 10 8 7

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

East	South	West	North

3♣	3♡(2)	Pass	3♠
Pass	4NT(3)	Pass	5♠
Pass	7♠	Pass	Pass

Pass

1—Hoping to quiet North.
2—Still forcing and believing opponents will read as void.
3—Has decided to risk seven spades, but does not want to show too much eagerness.
4—Feeling sure of a club lead.

East's Opening lead was the King of clubs, which was ruffed in Dummy, and from that point on there were no tricks for the opposing players.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If West is playing a contract of seven notrump, and the Opening Lead is the heart 6, by what line of play can the contract be fulfilled?

South, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

New Air Port Site Offered For Capital

Arlington Fears Loss of Revenue Under New Plan.

Opposition to Federal acquisition of Washington Airport and offering of a new site for the Capital's air field by former Representative Royal Johnson, of North Dakota, were highlights of yesterday's hearings on the McSwain airport bill before the House Military Affairs Committee.

Threatened loss of 25 per cent of the county's taxable land should the Federal Government acquire the airport was the basis for Arlington County's opposition to the site set forth at the hearing by Harry A. Fellows, of the Arlington County board.

The county is certain of losing $7,314 a year on 143 acres of land assessed at $332,480 and in addition will be deprived of waterfront rights, Fellows said.

He said the county already had suffered heavy losses in revenue and could bear no more. Fellows said he felt the county should be reimbursed by the Federal Government for loss of revenue in case the airport is taken over by it and also should be compensated for the $8,000 spent in construction of Mount Vernon highway.

Gravelly Point Pressed.

Representative Howard Smith, of Virginia, pressed the Gravelly Point proposal as "unquestionably superior for future airport purposes," saying that it possessed the advantage of moorings for airships and available approach by seaplanes.

Maintaining a polite attention until this point in the hearing, members of the Military Affairs Committee abruptly came to life when former Representative Johnson, an attorney speaking for local real estate operators, set forth a proposal for an airport located at Chillum, Md., one-half mile beyond the District line on Michigan avenue northeast.

Presenting the site on the theory that it could be developed at a small comparative cost for military purposes, Johnson pointed out that 1,400 acres are available at a cost of $1,350 per acre, which could be laid out into a tract 1 mile square where planes could land in formation. The land could be leveled in 30 days by 1,000 men, Johnson advised.

Moreover, Johnson asserted that Eugene L. Vidal, director of aeronautics in the Department of Commerce, having seen the site, would probably approve it for commercial purposes.

Favors Chillum Site.

Lieut. Col. Jacob Fickel, in charge of buildings and grounds for the Army Air Corps, speaking for the chief of the corps, testified that the Chillum site would be favorable from a military defense standpoint. He called Gravelly Point, "very dangerous" because of its nearness to Bolling Field.

Johnson, a former member of the Committee on Military Affairs, interpolated here that the President, if properly advised, would never approve Gravelly Point since Government buildings because of their proximity might be demolished by enemy bombs.

Hearings on the McSwain bill are expected to end today with testimony from heads of commercial airlines at Washington Airport. They are not expected to favor a commercial airport far removed from business centers, it was said.

Kew Gardens Nets $384,176 at Auction

Apartment House Bought for Insurance Firm.

Kew Gardens, the three-story brick apartment house at 2700 Q street northwest, was sold at auction yesterday to Fontaine C. Bradley, lawyer, representing the New York Life Insurance Co., for $384,176.29. Mr. Bradley was the sole bidder. The sale was advertised by Riggs National Bank, trustee. Vernon G. Owen was the auctioneer.

The building containing 132 apartments, was erected in 1922 at an estimated cost of $1,000,000. H. A. Kite was the builder and original owner. A. H. Sonnemann was the architect. The structure is 363 feet wide and 234 feet deep. Its current assessed valuation is $565,453, of which $65,453 represents land and $500,000, building.

Other owners were David C. Finney, Lafayette Franklin and Kew Gardens, Inc.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where bhysicians described his condition as critical. Police said Zimmerman apparently stepped into the path of the truck, driven by Woodrow Biship, of 1322 Twelfth street northwest. Bishop was released.

New Merger Plan Is Sent To Depositors

Proposal Joins Franklin, Mount Vernon and Mechanics Banks.

Depositors of the Franklin National Bank today will receive forms of agreement covering merger of that institution with the Mechanics Savings and Mount Vernon Savings banks.

Signature of depositors who represent 75 per cent in amount of total net unsecured liabilities are necessary to culmination of the merger plan signed by the Franklin Bank reorganization committee and formulated by the Treasurey Department.

Depositors were urged to make their responses as quickly as possible. Participation in sale of a portion of the increased capital stock of the Mechanics institution is a part of the plan. Franklin Bank depositors' quota is $100,000.

An early agreement sighed by 80 per cent of Franklin depositors is modified by the new management. That agreement called for independent resumption of business by the Franklin institution.

Salmond to Give Concert Tonight

Gunston Hall Presents English 'Cellist.

Felix Salmond, the distinguished English 'cellist, will be heard this evening in an invitational recital at Gunston Hall School, where his daughter, Muriel, is a student. Miss Mary L. Gildersleeve and Miss Mary Kerr, principals of the school, have sent out cards for the occasion.

Mr. Salmond last visited Washington several seasons ago. His program will be made up largely of classical works by Bach, Mozart, Beethoven and Saint-Saens, with some lighter numbers for the younger auditors.

Rites to Be Held Today For Modesta Sabata

Funeral services for Modesta Sabata, 41, of 926 L street northwest, assistant chef at Club Michel, who died Wednesday of injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile January 12, will be held this afternoon at 2:30 in the William J. Nalley undertaking establishment. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Sabata, a native of Spain, came to Washington about 12 years ago. He was a member of the Moose Lodge and the Shepherds of Bethlehem. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anna Sabata.

Big Bill, the German, and Josef, the South African, stood nose to nose and made faces at each other yesterday.

With Josef's every roar, his every enfuriated lunge, Big Bill emitted a resounding laugh which only added to Josef's rage. Just a couple of souls with mutual understanding and a stout set of bars between them. Josef, the Zoo's 61year-old lion, and William Karl Schultz, one of the world's best-known lion tamers, were doing an important act at the zoo.

Schulz came to Washington yesterday with 25 other circus and carnival showmen to help formulate codes for the tnbark and midway industries. Before laying their troubles before the Blue Eagle, however, they went on a professional holiday nad visited the zoo. And nothing could have prevented the powerful German from giving a sample of his routine.

Intense rivalry exists between carnival and circus folk, who don't like to have their callings confused with each other, but they buried the hatchet yesterday when they were luncheon guests of Dr. William M. Mann, director of the zoo.

Code Covers Fan Dancers.

There was William Newton, jr., president of the Outdoor Showmens Association of America, operator of the Honest Bill Circus and Oklahoma's authority on fan daneers and trapmen. Yes, sir, the Fatimas and Little Egypts are now fan dancers and the code hearings starting this morning will have much to do with determining the size of their fans and the size of their salaries.

Alt LaRue, who has clowned in big shows and small for some 30 years, is here too. He and Schulz will look after the interests of the performers as representatives of the A. B. A., the Actors Betterment Association.

The clown wore a serious expression yesterday—possibly because he is "at liberty" right now—and the only time he was seen to laugh was when the lion tamer almost had his right hand taken off by Josef.

"Ha, ha, ha. He's welcome to that business," philosophized LaRue, "I'll take clowning."

Freaks Are Actors to NRA.

At the carnival code hearing, the question arose: "What are freaks? Are they actors? Yes, they are actors, it was decided. At least for NRA purposes.

The association was anxious to get that point settled, because it represents 46 carnival companies, and that covers a lot of freaks.

Twenty-two circuses are affiliated with the organization. Incidentally, it was disclosed that there are only there railroad circuses left i nthe United States. All the others are motorized. One of them is the Downie Bros. Circus, whose general agent, Jerome T. Harriman, helped draft the code which will be discussed today.

Walter L. Main, who runs the Main Shows, and is said to be the oldest circus owner in the country, is another distinguished member of the Blue Eagle contingent. He is 78 years old.

Pay of 19,000 Cut to Average Of $10.80 Week

4,000 in District Face Loss of Jobs With Ban on New Material.

The pay of 19,000 District Civil Works employes will be reduced 20 per cent by an order of Administrator Harry L. Hopkins received yesterday by District officials. The order calls for a reduction of 20 per cent in working hours, and its enforcement is expected to force many workers back on relief rolls.

Execution of the edict will mean that the average weekly pay of the laborer will be reduced from $13.50 to $10.80, according to Capt. Howard F. Clark, chairman of the work planning and job assigning committee of the District CWA. Many of the workers are unable to subsist on the $13.50 pay and are no receiving relief.

The Hopkins order, which also forbids the purchase of additional material for projects now under way, without specific approval from Federal headquarters, may halt the work of 4,000 men who are negaged in street and sewer construction and improvement.

The order, which is effective immediately, reduces the work week of the laborer from 30 to 24 hours a week. Capt. Clark said the men will now work four 6-hour days, instead of five 6-hour days; while the white collar workers, will have their working week reduced from 39 to 30 hours a week.

Capt. Clark estimates there is sufficient materials on hand and on call for the street and sewer projects to last until February 1. It will be impossible for the District CWA to obtain materials after that date unless approval is given.

The total Civil Works pay roll last week was $250,000, and this will be reduced by $50,000. Vacancies may be filled but additional hiring is not allowed.

Commander Hall Is Stricken Here

Commander Norman Hall, formerly in charge of Coast Guard aviation here, was in a serious condition in Emergency Hospital yesterday suffering from a stomach ailment.

Commander Hall, stationed at Coast Guard headquarters here for seven years prior to his transfer to duty aboard the Sebago at New York last spring, was stricken last Saturday while on leave visiting his wife and two children in their home at 210 East Thornapple street, Chevy Chase, Md.

Hospital attendants described the commander as slightly improved following at blood transfusion Wednesday, but said his condition remained serious.

Commander Hall has been with the Coast Guard 28 years. Most of his service has been with the engineering division. He was in charge of aviation two years prior to his transfer to New York. He was succeeded by Commander G. R. O'Connor.

$90,840 to Renovate Old Postal Edifice Gives New Lease on Life

Can't Be Razed, So Extra Bureaus Will Be Housed There.

There's life in the old gal yet, as far as the old Postoffice Department Building at Pennsylvania avenue and Twelfth street is concerned.

Citizens and officials have been wondering for some time what is to become ot the tower-topped stone structure when Mr. Farley's department moves to its new marble halls across the street. The answer was provided by the Public Works Administration yesterday when it allotted $90,840 for improvement to the veteran edifice.

The money will go to connect the building with the central heating plant, for installation of four new elevators, and painting the interior. Then the building will be turned over to Government departments now occupying rented quarters.

Interior Department officials explained that under the law passed in the last session of Congress, the structure can not be torn down. Left with the building on their hands, they decided to undertake a little renovizing and attempt to save some rent money.

What departments will be transferred to the building after the Postoffice Department moves out has not been decided. There is room for several bureaus, however, and those occupying rented quarters will be shifted to the building.

Thus the massive stone abutments and clock towers will be left sticking up in the middle of the new Postoffice-Labor-Internal Revenue group for some time to come.

Detailed reports of the work of committees will be given by their chairmen, also a summary of the year's activities.

Tariff Cuts Called For By AAA Aid

Protective Policy Benefit Only Minority, Says Dr. Ezekiel.

Arms Reduction Also Is Urged at Peace Conference.

A high-tariff policy benefits only one-seventh of the country's working population, while raising the cost of living to the other six-sevenths, Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, economic adviser to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, told the ninth Conference on the Cause and Cure of War yesterday.

"The sooner we can get back to a freer interchange in the markets of the world, the better off the farmer will be," said Dr. Ezekiel.

Statement Significant.

The AAA economist has supplied many of the figures on which the New Deal policy is based. His statement yesterday, which came in answer to a question from the floor, was regarded as particularly significant, in view of the fact that the President is known to be considering changes in the present protective tariff policy.

Dr. Ezekiel pointed out that, of the 50,000,000 people gainfully employed under the 1930 census figures, nearly 25,000,000 belonged to the nonproducing, or service industries, such as transportation, &c. None of these benefit by protective tariffs, he said, while all of them suffer as consumers.

Benefit Minority.

The 10,000,000 engaged in agriculture, because of their dependence on world markets, likewise benefit by protection in only small degree, he said. Of the remaining 15,000,000 about half were engaged in industries, such as the automobile industry, which produce more cheaply than foreigners can. Therefore, tariff really protects only the 7,500,000 in those industries which can not meet low-priced foreign competition, he declared.

The economist was one of those who participated in the round table discussion held in the Hotel Washington yesterday afternoon on the subject, "The National Recovery Program—An Aid or Threat to World Peace?"

Dr. Harry D. Gideonse, of the University of Chicago, and Dr. Leo Pasvolsky, of the Brookings Institution, were other speakers.

D. C. Firms Favor NRA Continuance

Compliance Board Survey Also Brings Criticism.

The majority of Washington firms are in favor of the NRA being continued indefinitely, according to a survey conducted by Maj. Raymond J. Walter, executive officer of the local compliance board.

"Out of nearly 100 questionnaires sent out we received a generally favorable reaction to the NRA, together with some sound criticism," Maj. Walter said. "Many of the firms reported business has improved to such an extent that they believe the NRA should be continued indefinitely."

Some of the firms expressed the opinion the NRA will not be successful without restoration of the Government pay cut. Because Washington is not an Industrial city, business support must come mainly from Government employes, it was pointed out. Maj. Walter said he had not compiled the survey data in detail, but expected to have it ready late today.

Inmate of Home Found Dead; Poison Vial Near

Officials at the home said Miss Crance, who had been there since May, 1931, bought poison at a drug-store last week. She was pronounced dead by Dr. M. C. Dollman, of Stoneleigh Courts, and Acting Coroner A. Macgruder MacDonald was notified. There are no known relatives.

Ghostly Inn on University Campus Will Be Remodeled

Old Rossbourg Inn, located on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard at the University of Maryland, where Gen. LaFayette and other famous men once stopped. It is soon to be remodeled.

Lafayette Stopped There and Stains on Floor Hint of Tragedy.

Unseen ghosts of colonial gentlemen with powdered wigs, buckled shoes, and silken breeches—ghosts of women attored in hokskirts frilled with enormous ruffles—an eerie pantomime of colonial elegance—but ghosts!

This is the scene at old Rossbourg Inn, depicted by George Crossley, of the staff of the Diamondback, official University of Maryland publication, who has done much research work on the history of the building, located at the University, where LaFayette once spent the night.

The old hostelry is to be remodeled to its former elegance. The building was erected in 1792, and stands on a corner of the campus, on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard.

Bloodstains on Floor.

Crossley writes:

"Old darkies, speaking in hushed whispers and with the whites of their eyes showing in superstitious fear, told of seeing strange lights in the old inn, and of witnessing social affairs of the shades of our colonial forbears. This was after the famous men, among whom many and had ceased to be the most popular breakfasting place in this section of the country for historically famous men, among who many founders of this country may be enumerated.

"A story to make shivers chase themselves up and down the spinal columns of the more timid is still circulated about this old building. Rumor has it that a brutal murder was committed in one of the upper-story rooms. To substantiate this, one may find what appear to be bloodstains on a portion of the hall floor which was originally included in one of the upper rooms.

"On his way to Washington, Gen. Lafayette, French nobleman, statesman and soldier, stayed at the Rossbourg Inn on the night of October 11, 1824, and breakfasted there the following morning while a military escort sent from the Capital waited for him. At that time the Rossbourg Inn was the first overnight stopping place where change of horses was made in a journey from Alexandria or Georgetown to Baltimore, Philadelphia and points north.

The Lafayette Room.

"The room where Gen. Lafayette slept, known ever since as the Lafayette room, is the extreeme southeast chamber on the second floor. Except for the removal of partitions, substitution of mansard for a colonial gabled roof, and the laying of a new first floor, the old hostelry is the same as it was in the days when it was a stopover tavern for famous men.

"The enormous brass lock on the front door is the one which has been in use from the time of the erection of the old inn in 1792 until the theft of the large key within recent years. Another thing worthy of notice is the filled-in section of the lower part of the front door, which was originally a private entrance and exit for the hotel cat. This same interesting detail of colonial architecture may be noticed at Mount Vernon.

"Plans have been made to restore the old tavern to its original form and to use it either for a faculty and alumni clubhouse or as a university museum. The colonial-gabled roof will be restored, the large front porch will give place to the original small colonial front porch, and the Rossbourg Inn will be just as it was when the Baltimore boulevard was an impassable sea of mud for weeks each year."

Finance Factor In Gas Hearing Despite Protest

Over the objections of Assistant Corporation Counsel William A. Roberts, the Public Utilities Commission yesterday permitted a witness to testify as to the cost of financing as a factor of value to be used in the determination of gas rates to consumers.

Roberts based his objection on the contention that "cost of financing" is solely a reflection of the credit of the organization and should not be included in a valuation which is to determine a rate base. The testimony was given by Luther R. Nash, a public utility expert, who is a witness for the Washington Gas Light Co. The testimony was admitted without prejudice for "whatever it is worth."

The original cost of financing, according to testimony of S. F. Kosters, was $215,000, and this figure, "trended" to the valuation date of June, 1932, amounts to $597,000.

Fannie E. Tucker Rites Tomorrow

Burial Will Be Made in Glenwood Cemetery.

Last rites for Miss Fannie E. Tucker, 86, of 122 Eleventh street northeast, sister of Evan H. Tucker, president of the Northeast Washington Citizens Association, who died at Gallinger Hospital Wednesday, will be held tomorrow at the Lee undetraking etsablishment. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Miss Tucker is survived by three brothers, Evan, Samuel W. and Frank Tucker.

Apex Buildin Fits Scheme, Says Planners

Need for New Edifice Is Emphasized at Joint Session.

The Apex Building, capstone of the Pennsylvania avenue triangle, would harmonize with neighboring Federal edifices, and its construction is highly advisable.

This was the decision yesterday of a group of the Nation's leading architects, planners and art authorities, a decision which is expected to pave the way for an appropriation by Congress to start work on the disputed building. It was reached after discussion of criticism that the project would detract from the beauty of the adjoining Archives uilding, now under construction.

Congress a few years ago authorized erection of a building on the apex site and plans were approved, but no appropriation was made, due to Federal economy.

Need for uilding Cited.

The Treasury Department's board of architectural consultants, the National Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts Commission held their first joint meeting yesterday in several years to consider the question.

In approving the architectural plan and location of the Apex Building, they stated:

"No argument is needed to demonstrate the need for this building, as all of the other buildings, including the Archives Building, were designed in relation to it as a part of one general architectural composition."

The body also approved the Great Plaza, one of the principal features of the triangue group, presagnig an early start on this development. Its central decoration will be the Oscar Straus Memorial Fountain, in honor of the former Secretary of Commerce. The plaza will be located betwen the Commerce and Postoffice Buildings.

Robert Addresses Meeting.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the planning commission, presided at the joint meeting. Among those who led discussions were E. H. Bennett, chairman of the consultants' board; Dr. Charles Moore, chairman of the Arts Commission, and Arno B. Cammerer, director of National Parks, Buildings and Reservations.

In a brief address, L. W. Robert, jr., Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, expressed satisfaction at the cooperative program to develop and beautify the Capital.

Druggists of District Plan Midnight Banquet

The banquet is set for 11:30 o'clock at night. Officers said this hour was set because most of the pharmacists must keep their drug stores open until late. The affair will be held in Collier Inn. Charles R. Williams will be toastmaster and H. E. Baker is chairman of the banquet committee.

Clark Hearing Postponed.

United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday granted postponement until February 19 of the hearing of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Young Clark, for whom Florida authorities seek extradition on an indictment charging improper use of the mails.

Good morning! This is the time to buy an overcoat for NEXT winter if you don't need one now. A conservative guess is that the overcoats which we are selling today at $27.75, and worth $50.00 now, will be worth $60.00 next winter. It is the time to buy everything you will need as far ahead as you can afford to buy. One last time before prices go up, our prices, have come down.

Garden Slates Levinsky for Carnera Fight After Baer Refuses

Coast Boxer Declines to Bind Self

Refuses to Give Garden Option on Future Bouts If He Wins Title.

Program Is Mapped for Levinsky; Schmeling-Baer Bout Seen.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (AP).—The ing—a heavyweight title bout Will o' the Wisp match of box- between Primo Carnera and Max Baer—flitted out the window again today as negotiations in progress several days were terminated abruptly.

Col. John R. Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden, ended discussions he had carried on first with Jack Dempsey, then with Ancil Hoffman, manager of Baer, when the latter refused to sign with the Garden for future fights just in case the big Californian won Carnera's heavyweight title.

Start Levinsky Build-up.

As a result the Garden promptly launched a campaign to build King Levinsky, Chicago heavyweight, to stature of a legitimate title challenger. The Garden signed Levinsky for two bouts, the first against Charley Massera, February 9, the second against Walter Neusel, for March 2.

Levinsky, his sister Lena, who acts as his manager, and officials of the Chicago Stadium Corporation, came here yesterday seeking a match in Chicago with Max Schmeling, former heavyweight title holder due here tomorrow from Germany to start a comeback campaign. Unable to reach any sort of agreement with Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling, the kingfish and his sister moved over to the Garden at a most opportune moment.

If Levinsky beats Massera and Neusel he will be groomed through one more fight for a Carnera match outdoors here in June.

Insisted on Baer Option.

The Garden's insistence that Baer give them an option on his services for the future has been a stumbling block all along to negotiations for a title match that has loomed the most important bout available since Baer knocked out Schmeling and Carnera dethroned Jack Sharkey last June.

Baer has a working agreement with Jack Dempsey, who promoted his bout with Schmeling here, while Carnera is under contract through September of this year to the Garden.

There seemed every likelihood, in view of the developments, that Dempsey now would match Baer and Schmeling again for a return bout in San Francisco, probably in February.

Temple's '34 Gridmen May Battle Hawaii U.

Palo Alto, Calif., Jan. 18 (AP).—While Glenn S. "Pop" Warner, football coach of Temple University, has not received an invitation from the University of Hakaii to take his team over to the islands next season, he said today such an invitation would be "seriously considered" if received.

"We would only be able to make such a long trip during the Christmas holidays," he said.

ROUND-ROBIN play in the interhigh basket ball series resumes today at Tech gymnasium, where Roosevelt and Tech clash in the opener and Western meets Eastern in the double bill wind-up. The festivities open at 3:30 o'clock.

Current cellar mates, Roosevelt and Western will have a chance to redeem weird and spotty showings displayed to date in the title race.

Team Played Out.

The Roosevelts, as has been evident since the first appearance in conference play, are played out. Day in and day out play has sapped the luster, the fight and the form of the team, Jimmy Cavanaugh clicked to perfection against Eastern last Thursday, while his teammates wondered what it was all about. But Jimmy can't win ball games by himself. And to top the breaks of the game for the Ruf Riders, Jesse Black, sterling guard of the team, has caught the flu and will be out of the line-up indefinitely.

Western, the critics are convinced, has the "makings." This was proved in the play against Tech and Central, but somehow or other the team wound up these games on the wrong side of the count. Green, Corcoran and Frank have looked good in the play to date, but the team has fallen to pieces in the closing minutes of the games. Stadtler, too, is a busybody on the hardwoods and although slight of build has proven the spark in the Georgetowners' attack.

Eastern Is Stronger.

Eastern, with Nolan starring after a slow start in pre-series warm-up play, and with Tom Davis back at the tip-off position after hobbling about in a limp earlier in the season has enchanced the potency of the Lincoln Parkers' attack.

Tech, despite a defeat at the hands of Central in an extra period thriller, must still be reckoned as the team to beat for the championship. The injury of Jim Roland, fine reserve forward, has not helped the cause of the Technicians any, but Arty Boyd still has a flock of material to throw into a fray without seriously weakening the Maroon and Gray's chances.

Demanded by Fans, Londos Bout Is Set

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (AP).—The matching of Jim Londos, recognized here as the world's wrestling champion, and Hans Kampfer, of Germany, for a title bout next Wednesday, was announced today by Ed Contos, local promoter.

Londos was ordered Tuesday to defend his title against Kampfer by the Maryland Athletic Commission, which is associated with the National Boxing Association. Contos arranged the match in New York yesterday.

In ordering the title match, the commission said it had received numerous letters demanding the pairing of the two wrestlers.

Goodwin, Glenn Gain Miami Final

Will Meet for Mid-Winter Golf Crown Today.

Miami, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Tommy Goodwin, of Monroe, N. Y., defending champion, will meet Brooks Glenn, of Miami, tomorrow in the 36-hole final of the Miami Country Club's midwinter golf tourney. They won their semifinal matches today.

Glenn eliminated Bill Wilkinson, of Indianapolis, 1 up, and Goodwin defeated Curtis Bryan, of Jacksonville, Fla., also 1 up.

Goodwin carded a par 36 on the outgoing nine and was all square with Bryan at the turn. Both were on the last green in 3. Bryan putted up dead and laid Goodwin a partial stymie. The champion carromed his ball off Bryan's into the cup for par 5, winning 1 up.

Meanwhile, Glenn, who was 4 up over Wilkinson at the turn, faltered aged to beat the Midwesterner. Wilon the back stretch and barely mankinson, by brilliant golf, had reduced Brook's lead to 1 up at the seventeenth. The Indianapolis player missed a golden opportunity to square the match when he missed an 8-foot putt on the final green.

Blaik to Shift Frosh Drill Method

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Coordination of freshman football training with that of the varsity, looking to restoration of Dartmouth's gridiron prestige, was promised today by Earl ("Red") Blaik, newly appointed head coach.

"First and foremost," Blaik said, "I shall propose elimination of a formal freshman schedule. I feel we should concentrate upon development of individual freshman players, looking to their sophomore years, and that they should be taught the plays and formations of the varsity.

"All too often the freshman idea is that of winning freshman games which is all very well, but, compared with the varsity, somewhat meaningless."

Shift From Systems.

"For one thing," he said, "the freshman often has learned a sort of system in his prep or high school. Then he gets a new one in his first college year, and he has to learn a fresh set of plays in his first time out for the varsity."

Blaik probably will be able to go through with his plan, for he has been empowered to appoint a new freshman coach and could have his program in full operation within one year.

Woodward Lights Win From Roosevelt, 23-21

The Woodward Prep basket ball team nosed out the Roosevelt lightweights on the Central Y floor yesterday, 23-21. The game was close and hard-fought throughout.

Contradictory

CARL HUBBELL, pitching ace of the New York Giants, whom Washington fans in general and the Nats in particular remember for his brilliant double victory over Manager Joe Cronin and his mates in last year's World Series, said yesterday he had not signed a contract with the Giants for next year. Reports Wednesday were that Hubbell had affixed his signature to a document calling for an $18,000 salary.

Tilden, Vines and Nusslein May Clash in Title Matches

CLEVELAND, Jan. 18 (AP).—A series of championship tennis matches between Bill Tilden, Ellsworth Vines and Hans Nusslein, with the latter's world pro title at stake, appeared today a likelihood for next spring.

Informed that Nusslein desired such a meeting, Tilden said, "Both Mr. Vines and myself accept with pleasure and will meet him out of doors in the spring, each in a series of five matches, if and when satisfactory terms, dates and places for play can be arranged.

Replying to a charge by Nusslein that Tilden should not be billed for the "world pro championship," the latter explained he believed the German player was confused in the names of the titles.

"Nusslein is the holder of the professional world's title as recognized by the International Federation, of which the United States Professional Association is not a member," Tilden said. "Vines and I are playing for the indoor world's professional championship, which is held by me, not Mr. Nusslein."

Although Tilden lost to Nusslein in a series of matches in Berlin last September, he was handicapped, he said, by a sore arm, and recalled that "in more than 150 matches I have defeated him by a margin greater than two to one." He added, however, "I consider Mr. Nusslein a great player, fully worthy of the title he holds, and we will gladly play him for it in America."

Tilden said that owing to existing contracts it would be impossible for him to engage in the proposed matches with the German until after April 1.

Harder, Now a "Papa," Says Wage Too Small

Omaha, Jan. 18 (AP).—Although he has returned his 1934 contract unsigned, Mel Harder, Cleveland American League pitcher, wants it known that he is not a holdout. He is merely a young man with eight pounds of added responsibility—a daughter born Tuesday.

"They gave me a raise, but it wasn't big enough," Harder said in explaining why he returned the contract.

Italy's Track Star Not to Visit U. S.

Beccali, Training Halted by Snow, Eliminated as Winter Attraction.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (AP).—A snowstorm in Milan, Italy, several days ago which interfered with the training of Luigi Beccali, Olympic 1,500-meter champion and world record holder at the distance, today appeared to have made improbable a hoped-for invasion of American indoor tracks this winter by the Italian speedster.

An invitation to run in four meets was extended to Beccali by the Amateur Athletic Union, but Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the union, said that if Beccali was not able to appear for his first scheduled appearance February 3 the invitation would have to be withdrawn, regretfully.

Beccali had planned to sail January 10, but along came the snowstorm, and he asked for an extension of the date of his first appearance. A cable from Milan today indicated that if it was not granted he would not come at all, as he did not want to "appear in America untrained."

Ferris Is Surprised.

"We would like to have Beccali come," Ferris said today, "but we advised the Italian federation on January 12 that if he could not arrive in time to run February 3 we would have to withdraw our invitation. I was surprised at the dispatch indicating Beccali thought the matter still was open for decision.

"If I do not hear officially from Italy by tomorrow I plan to cable them again for a definite answer."

As planned by Ferris, the Italian would have competed in the Millrose games at New York February 3, the Boston Athletic Association games February 10, the New York Athletic Club games February 17, and the National Amateur Athletic Union games at New York, February 24, the three clubs and the National association jointly underwriting the expenses of his trip.

O'Doul Quits His Golf, To Practice Baseball

San Francisco, Jan. 18 (AP).—Frank "Lefty" O'Doul, New York Giants outfielder and former National League batting champion, plays golf in the seventies, but just the same he's giving up golf to concentrate on baseball until after the 1934 season.

That is, he's giving it up except for a round "just once in a while."

O'Doul made this announcement today, explaining he was used as a pinch hitter last year and "couldn't break into the regular line-up."

Arriving home from a trip to the Orient, the big outfielder said he was going to take his bat and spokes out to Golden Gate Park and "play baseball with the kids."

"Golf is great for a ball player," Lefty added. "I never hit better than when I played plenty of golf. But it takes plenty of time I should be devoting to baseball, you see."

No Story—Kindly Excuse

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (Spl.).—My favorite box fighter, the one whom Joe Humphries, the Madison Square Garden announcer, calls Prime-o Cannerio, has returned to the United States to prepare his carcass and harden it to withstand 15 rounds of assault and battery at the hands of Tommy Loughran. There are many, including myself, who believe that a light coat of tan or a layer or two of vanishing cream will be sufficient to keep his skin from blistering when Tommy flicks him with his glove tips, but some of the parties who are handling Da Preem are letting on that they are worried to death over this impending brutal encounter and maybe they are right. I wouldn't know.

What interests me at the moment is that Primo's manager, Signor Luigi Soresi, remained in that sunny Italy while the old snaggle-tooth returned alone. Always curious, I am wondering why the signor is remaining out of the picture.

If it is just because he does not wish to have to take the stand and testify in the bankruptcy proceedings by means of which Da Preem is trying to get out of handing over 25 grand to the London hash slinger whose affections a London court ruled he had trifled with that much worth, then it just comes under the head of legal chiseling and I am not interested.

I had hoped that it was something more sinister, that certain parties had promised the signor great violence and harm should he return to these shores, more in hurt than in anger against him for taking Da Preem over to Italy to fight for a medal. You can not cut up a medal in small pieces or shares the way you can a dollar in change. I think the certain parties would have been much more cheerful if Da Preem had fought for a dollar, or may be a couple of lira. But a medal—phoole?

There has been some misunderstanding about the official position of Soresi as manager and adviser to Da Preem and how he got it. In fact, at one time, the theory was advanced that the signor had purloined or borrowed Carnera away from his management, but such an act would have called for a massing of armed forces. I would think such as the signor does not possess. The signor, they tell me, is a man of peace. You would not carelessly go up to the bureau that operates Da Preem in this country and say, "Good afternoon, boys, I'm in on Carnera. From now on I'm the manager," unless you were very, very tough. Very tough. The signor is a man of peace.

Soresi is always referred to in the press as the "Wealthy Italian Banker," which sounds very imposing, but then everything in the fight business has to sound imposing. In those dear departed days, when J. Humbert Fugazy was promoting ghost-fights and erecting phanton stadiums, Humbert would thrill the boys by advising them to appear at his office the following day at 3 o'clock; that he had just dug up a wealthy and socially prominent millionaire from Portland, Oreg., who was going to give him five million dollars to build a stadium to put the Madison Square Garden out of business.

We would all show up promptly at 3 and sit around Humbert's palatial office on Broadway near Fiftieth street, with our feet up on the desk smoking cigarettes and swapping lies. Nothing would happen except maybe about around 3:30 some scratchy guy, with a dirty shirt and the bottom cut of his pants, would come in and bum a butt off the boys or chisel a couple of skulls for Ebbets Field.

An hour or so later the boys would get restless and say, "Hey, Humbert, where the hell is this lousy millionaire?" Fugazy would place his fingers to his lips and say, "Shhhh! That was him in here just a little while ago. He is in town incognito and does not wish to be recognized by anybody. Come around tomorrow afternoon. I will have an important announcement to make. I have dug up a wealthy and socially prominent oil man. He is going to bring the Campanile over here and we are going to make the greatest sports arena in the world out of it. He is also going to bring the leaning tower of Pisa, and we are going to straighten it out so that it will be on the up and up."

Allegany Takes 33d Straight League Game

Frostburg, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Allegany High School, of Cumberland, inaugurated the quest for its fourth consecutive Western Maryland Interscholastic League championship by downing Coach Hunter's warriors, 41 to 12, here.

Beall was limited to four field goals, while Allegany piled up a total of 17. Twigg, who led the attack with four, got three of them early in the fourth quarter. Curry, Rice and Koegel each had three goals to their credit. It was Allegany's thirty-third consecutive victory in league competition since its last defeat in 1931.

G. U. to Meet Maryland, Is Indication

Athletic Heads Seek to Heal Long Breach by Game Next Fall.

Nov. 24 Seen as Date; W. Maryland Seeks to Aid by Shift.

GEORGETOWN and Maryland University officials have been in conference with a view to effecting a renewal of athletic relations, specifically a football game next fall, it was learned yesterday.

Despite public demand for a Maryland-Georgetown game, the institutions have remained at odds since 1920 when relations were severed. withinthe pest week, Athletic Director H. C. (Curly) Byrd, of Maryland, and Athletic Director H. Gabriel Murphy, of Georgetown, have conferred on the possibility of staging a game in November.

Shift In Dates.

Georgetown has already paved the way for making November 24 available for the Maryland game by requesting a transfer of its game with Western Maryland scheduled for that date. According to a Baltimore report. Western Maryland has asked the Baltimore Stadium Board to shift its Georgetown date to the Saturday following Thanksgiving Day.

For several seasons Georgetown has been eager to resume relations with Maryland, but al negotiations were unsuccessful. Before Athletice Director Lou Little revised the sports eligibility code at the Hilltop in 1926, Maryland refused to meet the Hoyas, pleading Georgetown's inability to meet the Southern Conference athletic requirements.

All Attempts Futile.

Since complying with the rules prohibiting transfer students and application of the one-year residence and freshman rules, Georgetown's code has met conference requirements, but all attempts to schedule Maryland failed.

Within the past year, a rapproachment has ben observed with the football teams engaging in informal scrimmage and intramural squads of the two institutions engaging in games.

According to a statement attributed to Athleitc Director Murphy, of Georgetown, is was said: "There is every possibility that Georgetown and Maryland will meet on the gridiron this fall. If a date can not be arranged for next season, we probably will get together in1935."

Court Denies Judgment To Ex-Giant Treasurer

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 19 (AP).—The court of appeals today dismissed a $42,827.83 judgment obtained by Francis X McQuade, former New York City magistrate, against Charles A. Stoneham and John J. McGraw, president and vice president, respectively, of the New York Giants.

The judgment was for salary claimed as treasurer of the Giants from 1928 to 1932.

McQuade was ousted late in 1928 as treasurer of the National Exhibition Co., operators of the Giants, by the election of Leo J. Bondy, personal attorney to Stoneham.

The former treasurer contended he was eliminated after he had "admonished" Stoneham about the payment of interest on certain loans due the company.

General A., $8.40 Choice, Noses Out Fancy Flight in Tropical Park Feature

Flying Sailor Runs 3d in Thriller

Texas Tommy Is Winner of First; Fred Almy Returns $10.50.

TROPICAL PARK, Jan. 18 (AP). The Osceola Purse of 6 furlongs, which attracted 11 of the better-class platers here today, was run to order for J. Kelly's General A. and the veteran sprinter accounted for his second local victory in as many attempts. It took the 6-year-old's best to win, for he got up in the last lunge to nose out J. E. Smallman's Fancy Flight in 1:11 flat. Mrs. C. M. Henderson's Flying Sailor was beaten a neck for the place in an exciting finish. Zorana was close fourth.

Fancy Flight and Flying Sailor ran like a team into the stretch, the first named having what edge there was to that point. Meanwhile Alfred Robertson was sitting pretty in third position with the best horse, waiting until the two leaders had helped to beat each other before making his move. General A. sailed around the outside of the pacemaker turning into the final straightaway, but he could not overhaul Fancy Flight until a step from the pay-off line.

Texas Tommy Winner.

Texas Tommy started the talent off on the right pedal extremity by driving to victory at $4.60 for $2. Screen ran the winner to three parts of a length and had nearly 2 lengths to spare over poles apart.

Another favorite made good when Knights Hope accounted for the second purse in easy style. The colt ran Designate into defeat in the first 5 furlongs and, with plenty in reserve, drew out in the final sixteenth to register by 2 lengths. The winner paid $3.70.

Fred Almy, which has been racing in hard luck, entered the winning circle in the third event. Jimmy Hunter brought him from close off the pace to win by a length. The next half dozen horses were heads apart, with In High saving the place from Style Corner. Haggerson ruled favorite and Earl Porter had him out in front for a half mile or so, but the gelding curled up when challenged. Fred Almy returned $10.50.

Border Patrol Victor.

Earl Porter got into his stride in the fourth race, which he won astride Border Patrol by the narrowest of margins. Customer put up stubborn opposition for the length of the stretch and was not beaten until the final stride. Appomattox was a half dozen lengths away in the third hole. Border Patrol paid off at slightly less than 3 to 1.

Cabochon ran back to his previous good effort to take the sixth purse, but the colt was out to the limit and lucky in the bargain to beat Hawk Moth by a length. David W. was third, another length back. Cabochon broke well and took the lead from Miss Donovan at the far turn. He opened up a wide advantage but Hawk Moth, which broke poorly and was last in the early running, closed like a house afire and was gaining with every stride at the end. Cabochon paid $6.70.

Earl Porter grabbed another brace of winners for the day when he guided Sky Heaven, $3.60, first home by four lengths in the last race. Darkling beat Column Right by a half length for the place.

Shepherd College Wins.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Shepherd College, Shepherdstown, W. Va., defeated Frederick Blue Ridge basket ball team at the State Armory, 40 to 23. The "Rams" took the lead in the first period on a side shot by Waldeck followed by a goal by L. Maddex. The locals came back with three goals in quick succession which gave them a 1 point lead. The West Virginians then went into the lead and finished the half 11 points to the good.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The movement of a glacier caused a disastrous flood 600 miles away on the Shyok River in 1929 by releasing pent up waters into the Indus Valley of the Himalaya Mountains. Three years before that the glacier had closed slowly down across the valley, damming the river. For three years the waters piled up behind this great dam until in 1929 the ice burst, releasing the flood.

The river level rose 50 feet immediately, and for 600 miles lands along the stream were flooded.

* * * *

One of the strangest transportation vehicles ever designed was Peter Nissen's invention of a giant ball in which he hoped to ride to the North Pole. Nissen intended to get inside the big ball, inflate it, then let the wind blow it across ice, snow and sea to the North Pole. In case of an adverse wind, it was his plan to deflate the ball and anchor it until the wind changed.

He went so far as to build a smaller bag to test his plan by crossing Lake Michigan in it. Strange as it seems, the strange device worked—and Nissen was blown across the lake by a winter gale late in 1905.

He crossed the lake in the ball, which he had named "The Foolkiller," but in getting ashore from it he became exhausted and froze to death on the beach. They found his body two days later.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Tropical Park Race Track, Jan. 18.

Pardon me, friend, but perhaps I didn't call my shots. If you will allow the great Bennings to quote the great Bennings, he said last night, "I'm aiming at four or nothing." And did the boy make good? Here they are, count them: Texas Tommy, Knights Hope, Fred Almy and Cabochon. In addition, two of the winners were my second choices and the other was my third pick. Four winners probably gave Clocker Mike a headache. However, tomorrow's another day—from sunup to sundown. It was with renewed vigor (whatever that is), that I attacked the speed books tonight. Seven or nothing tomorrow. Ready, aim, fire.

BILL.

First race—Unless some of the first time starters have been hiding speed, the opener should be a romp for Abner. This one has had education and is fairly consistent. Love Sick comes to the race with the Whitney stamp. Bank Holiday for the show.

Second race—Bickering turned in a sizzling effort to win for the B. B. Stable last out and is the day's best bet. Calycanthus is recommended by some better-than-average workouts. Gay Joe appears capable of taking care of the others.

Third race—Happy Anne ran an encouraging race last out and gets the Bennings call over this band of sprinters. Dont Blush has improved with leaps and bounds hereabouts and is dangerous. I still believe that Suspicious is due to wake-up.

Fourth race—Happy Scot barely missed the important end of a purse in his previous effort, losing by a nose margin. Asked to go only five and a half furlongs tomorrow and likes that distance. Premeditate and The Gen to complete the money picture.

Fifth race—Broad Meadows turned in a bang-up second for me earlier in the week. I know he is as fit as hands can make him. Merrily On is the one to beat. Stroll Along for the show and all of it if the top ones make mistakes.

Sixth race—Just Fun has been trying to kid us. He will be a fair price tomorrow and his handlers may decide to let him out several notches. If he fails, I recommend that you run him down. Pencader has regained good form and promises to figure in the money distribution. The cheap Redivivus might wiggle into the pay.

Seventh race—Everfair gets in with light weight and must be considered here. Just Buck, a probable Porter mount, will be troublesome. War Banner has his speed and should make a battle of it.

3-Year-Olds Facing Test Saturday

Jefferson Derby Is First Stake for New Crop of Eligibles.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—The Jefferson Derby, to be run at Jefferson Park Saturday, will afford 3-year-olds their first opportunity to compete publicly for the many derbies that are to be run on American tracks during 1934.

Saturday's fixture, carrying an added value of $2,500 over the mile and a sixteenth route, in all probability will have a field of eight entered when the entries close early Friday.

Mrs. J. Zoeller's undefeated Tatanne is top weight of the probable starters under 121 pounds and rules the pre-race favorite in the betting. The daughter of St. James breezed a mile in 1:43 1-5 in preparation for her Derby effort and is fit and ready for the first real test of her career.

E. K. Bryson's Pharatime, which worked a mile in 1:45 today, is regarded as the most formidable contender to the St. James' filly and is certain to go to the post Saturday. Others expected to contest are Brustigert, a mile in 1:41 1-5 handily; Charming Sir, a mile and a sixteenth in 1:50 galloping; Secluded, Morning Cry, Enigmatic and Just Mrs. The latter will have a public trial in a eight panel claiming event at Jefferson Park tomorrow.

Blue Day's Rush Wins Jefferson Park Feature

New Orleans, Jan. 18 (AP).—Blue Day, a consistent 6-year-old son of Whiskaway, gave A. G. Tarn another victory today when he came from behind to take the 6-furlong feature at Jefferson Park.

While E. E. Major's Overshoes and A. J. Halliwell's Contribute were alternating at setting the pace, Jockey Leyland held Blue Day under restraint. At the head of the stretch, the Tarn racer shot into a contending position and in the run for the judges' stand pulled away to win by a length in the good time of 1:12 4-5.

Contribute, out in front at the head of the stretch, held on gamely to beat Don Vern out of the place. Well-backed in the mutuels, Blue Day paid $9.20 straight.

Howell Is "Dead-Eye Dick" Of G. W. Basket Ball Team

Young Man Came East to Win Fame on Court; Tops Scorers.

JIMMY HOWELL, George Washington forward, reversed the old advice about young men going West, and came East instead to seek athletic fame, and the reverse english is working quite well. The lad tops the scoring list in the District and recently was acclaimed as the deadliest shot in Eastern collegiate basket ball by a well-known New York sports writer.

Howell didn't see real action until the latter part of last season when Wick Parrick neglected his school work to such an extent that the powers that be gave him a parole from basket ball. Howell stepped into the breach and immediately won a place in the fans' hearts with a classy exhibition of basket ball. His scoring record for 18 games, serving in many of them as a sub, was 153 points, an average of 8½ points a game.

This season he has 37 field goals and 30 fouls, a total of 104 points, to his credit, and, with eight games to go, may come close to 200. His foul-shooting is particularly keen, as the record of 30 in 42 attempts will attest.

Howell has played basket ball since his grammar school days. He earned his first sports letter at the tender age of 12, at Vincent High School, Oklahoma. He captained the team in his senior year and it won the regional championship. Against the Fort Sill quintet Howell scored his greatest number of points in a single game, 32. He wanted to match that record against City College this year, but something went wrong.

In action the lad has an indefatigable spirit and a seemingly inexhaustible supply of energy. He tips the Fairbanks at 155 pounds, stands 5 feet 11 inches tall, and is 21 years old. He is a junior majoring in education. Unusually long arms and big hands are his greatest assets—particularly when standing in the corner and trying a one-hand shot.

DeOro Scores to Hold Lead in 3-Cushion Play

Philadelphia, Jan. 18 (AP).—Alfredo DeOro, of New York, today held his National Championship three-cushion billiard lead by defeating Earl Lookabaugh, of Chicago, 50 to 49, after the latter had taken a lead in the early innings. It equaled the longest match of the tournament to date. DeOro, the 71-year-old Cuban, who formerly held the three-cushion and pocket-billiard crowns simultaneously, had high run of 5, 1 more than his opponent's best.

In the other afternoon match Charles McCourt, of Cleveland, won his third game in five starts by conquering Robert B. Harper, Denver amateur, 50 to 41, in 65 innings. McCourt rallied after trailing for the first 35 innings.

Jameson, D. C., Golfer, Advances in Florida

He trounced G. M. Lawrence, of Chicago, by 6 up and 4 to play. The Washington golfer played scintillating golf throughout, excelling with his fine work around the greens. Everett G. Livesey, of Columbus, Ohio, winner of the qualifying medal, won by default from Dan Chappel, of Miami.

Friends Win, 36-29, From St. Alban's Five

The Friends School quintet defeated St. Alban's, 36-29, in a spectacular game played at American U. yesterday. McKee starred for St. Alban's, plopping in 7 field goals and 7 free shots for 21 of his team's 29 points.

The general all-around play of Friends and sterling passing carried them to the ultimate victory.

Stocks Yield Fraction After Dollar Climbs

Realizing Uncovers Good Demand; Sales Drop to 2,176,080 Shares.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Foreign exchanges provided the chief interest in today's markets. The dollar's strong advance, particularly against sterling, was accompanied by another sidewise, indecisive shifting of stock positions.

Sterling broke several cents, putting it well under $5 for the first time since early November.

Gold currencies were also down, but less emphatically. Dealings were described as rather thin, though the trend none the less attracted attention and comment.

Stocks' Sales Specialized.

The stock market was again largely a specialized affair. Realizing sales still uncovered a good demand and offerings on the whole were well absorbed. Rails, metals, motors and their accessories and an assortment of miscellaneous specialties took turns at bearing the bull standard, but none of the frequent rallies accomplished a great deal even though volume was larger on advances than declines.

The net change for the averages was a small loss in a turnover of 2,176,080 shares.

U. S. Trade Balance.

Exchange experts were not greatly surprised by the dollar's performance. Surmises of British intervention to put down the pound were generally discredited, dealers stressing rather the evidence that fugitive capital was returning to markets in this country, adding to the dollar demand created by commercial needs.

It is pointed out that America's favorable trade balance may make it difficult to keep the dollar down; at least, it would not be surprising if the American unit advanced until the proposed stabilization fund affords a means of control.

An international monetary conflict to depress currency rates would not be welcome in many quarters which are already hoping that an understanding can be reached without recourse to costly "war."

Conjecture as to the durability of France's gold standard tenure is again heard, the point being made that operation of both the British and American equalization funds entails accumulation of French balances. The latest statement of the Bank of France shows another gain in gold and its ratio moved above 79 per cent.

Domestic Copper Up.

With domestic copper up ¼ cent to 8¼ cents a pound, as consumers bought more freely, stock traders switched to metal issues for a time during the morning, but net gains for this group were mostly fractional.

Rails were the sturdiest of the major divisions, helped not only by the momentum of their own recent improvement, but also by declaration of a dividend by Lousiville & Nashville. Several less active carriers were strong. Boston & Maine rose 4 and Reading nearly as much. Union Pacific and Louisville & Nashville were up 1 or more.

Steady To Firm.

U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Chrysler, General Motors, Can, Union Carbide and American Can closed steady to firm. Allied Chemical was down nearly 3. General Electric, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Inland Steel, Pullman and General Railway Signal were among the losers.

Changes in the Federal Reserve statement were of a routine nature. Currency circulation continued to decline, the drop this time amounting to $41,000,000.

Incidentally, the total is now almost even with a year ago, when hoarding was becoming popular. Excess reserves of commercial member banks were said to be above $900,000,000, somewhat higher than last week. The New York City system members reported a moderate net gain in loans and investments. "All other" loans, embracing commercial accommodations, expanded $15,000,000 and the banks added $17,000,000 in securities other than U. S. Governments. The latter portfolio was up $15,000,000.

Robey's Review

Foreign Exchange Market in Last Few Days Has Given an Indication of the Task Confronting the U. S. in Holding Dollar Down to 60 Cents.

By Ralph West Robey.

Foreign exchange markets in the last few days have provided an interesting, and on the whole rather significant, commentary on the current monetary policy of the Administration. They have shown, just about as conclusively as financial data ever can show, that 60 cents is too low a price for our money at present. This has been all the more remarkable in view of the fact that there seems to be no ground for doubting that this will be set by Congress as the upper limit for stabilization.

To appreciate the force of the record made by the foreign exchange market it is well to recall that for about a month before the start of this week the rate for pound sterling had remained relatively steady at around $5.05 to $5.10. Swings out of this range always were short lived. It widely was believed, accordingly, that the market was being carefully controlled by Governmental agencies, some people thinking the control was coming from the United States and others that it was from the British treasury. In any case something closely approximating a de facto stabilization appeared to be in force. It was against this background of stability that the President's monetary message of Monday was thrown, stating that the dollar should be worth not more than 60 cents.

Was Bad Break When Message Appeared.

The immediate effect of the message was to cause a bad break of the dollar in the foreign exchange market. In short order the price for sterling jumped 7 or 8 cents and closed for the day around $5.15. Even at this price, however, the dollar still was substantially above 60 cents, as measured by the price of gold in London.

By the following morning, Tuesday, it became apparent, nevertheless, that even this price was too high. In consequence the price of sterling started to slip. By the end of the day it was down to a little under $5.09. This decline, too, or so foreign exchange experts maintain, was in the face of considerable selling of dollars by the agents of the United States Treasury.

On Wednesday even greater strength appeared in the dollar. The opening price in London was $5.07½. Within 20 minutes the rate was forced down to $5.04½, and for a little while it began to look, according to commentators, like a stampede in favor of the dollar that easily might carry the pound below $5.

Before the movement got far, however, the United States Treasury stepped into the market with relatively heavy offerings of dollars. In consequence, the downward trend was broken and soon the rate was back about where it had started. It was held there until about 2 o'clock, when another wave of dollar buying came along and again drove the pound down some 4 cents.

Yesterday there simply was no holding the dollar. The demand for it, according to commentators, was "tremendous." The result was that the price for sterling dropped to $4.94—a loss of 20 cents since the first of the week.

Figures Not Large As Against Earlier Variations.

Now, it is true that 20 cents is not great as compared with some fluctuations that have taken place within recent months in the sterling rate. This particular ten cents, however, was in the wrong direction. Instead of carrying the dollar closer to the value which the President says he is convinced, as a result of "careful study," is the maximum that our "public interest" can stand, it has carried it in the opposite direction. The result is that after four days, and four days when the United States Government has been exerting constant pressure upon the dollar, it still is worth more than Congress is about to write into the statutes as the maximum value it can have.

This does not mean, of course, that ultimately the Government will not be successful in its attempt to depreciate the value of our money in the foreign exchange markets. Any government, if it follows sufficiently vigorous policies, can do that. It does mean, nevertheless, that 60 cents is too low a figure in view of our present economic and financial condition, and in order to hold the dollar at such a point the Government must be prepared to sell dollars in large amounts—sell them in sufficient amount to offset not only our favorable trade position but as well the capital that now is flowing back to this country.

Goods Markets.

New York, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Buying in cotton goods continued dull and prices remained firm today. Convertibles were more active. Fine combed materials were featured in fashion shows. Rayon yarns continued in moderate call with fine denjers selling best. Silk gray goods were firmer and print cloth advances held. Burlaps were firm at Calcutta and steady in spot markets. Wool dress goods sold better than the finer worsteds.

Bonds Drive To High Level On Wide Front

Although the trading volume again dwindled the sales total of $20,900,000, par value, was still far above normal. The average for 60 domestic corporate loans showed a gain of six-tenths of a point.

While traders and investors continued to watch developments in the Administration's monetary program closely, the demand for corporation maturities was attributed largely to expectations of continued improvement in business.

Federal Loans Quiet.

U. S. Government securities were quiet and the majority were off 1-32d to 6-32ds of a point. Treasury 3s and one of the 3¾s finished moderately higher. The turnover in this department amounted to only about $2,700,000.

There were a few soft spots in the rails, but gainers of 1 to 3 or more points included some liens of Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Central Pacific, Burlington, Erie, Great Northern, Hudson & Manhattan, Illinois Central, M.-K.-T., New York Central, Nickel Plate, New Haven and Southern Pacific.

Bonds of Denver & Rio Grande dropped 2 to 4 points and Western Pacific first 5s lost 5.

Utilities Are Favorites.

The utilities were among the day's favorites. Issues of Columbia Gas and Laclede Gas got up 2 to more than 6 points, while advances of fractions to a point or more were held by loans of American Telephone, American & Foreign Power, International Telephone, North American Edison, Portland General Electric, Western Union and Postal Telegraph.

Among industrial gainers of 1 to 2 or more were bonds of Vanadium, U. S. Rubber, Studebaker, Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron and National Dairy.

Cuban obligations were the feature of the foreign division, spurting 1½ to 10 points following reports that Washington would soon grant recognition to the new government. Bonds of Argentina and Colombia were up 1 to 3 and some of the Germans improved. Government loans of the Dutch East Indies, Great Britain and France were heavy.

Bonds—Dollar advances did not disturb bonds and prices continued to rise along a wide front. Gains averaged six-tenths of a point. Sales volume declined to $20,909,000.

Curb—Late hour selling resulted in a mildly irregular close. Prices were steady in early trading. Utilities fluctuated narrowly. There was some demand in specialties. Sales dropped to 307,000 shares.

Wheat—Breaks in British exchange rates were blamed for losses in wheat. Other grains joined the declines. May wheat sold at 89½; July, at 87¼.

Cotton—Price movements were nervous and irregular. Declines were checked by trade buying or covering, but the advance met futher liquidation or scattered selling. March sold at 11.16. The general market declined 1 to 11 points. January closed at 11.12.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed firm, 55 to 64 points higher. January sold at 9.35; March, at 9.47 to 9.49.

Sugar—Raw sugar advanced 1 point to the basis of 3.18; refined was unchanged at 4.30.

Gold—Bar gold in the United States was unchanged at $34.45 per ounce. It sold in London at 32 shillings and 10 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar advanced on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $4.95½ to the English pound; 6.24½ cents to the French franc, and 37.72 cents to the German mark.

France Cuts Duty On American Fruit

Paris, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Importers of American apples and pears were notified today that the government had agreed to reduce import and license taxes.

It was believed that American exports would be benefited materially, and that it would be possible to send to France the entire quota of 20,000 tons of apples and pears agreed on in exchange for an increase in the French wine quota.

The apple tax was reduced sufficiently to permit apples to enter at about 54 cents a case, compared to $1.68 previously, and pears at 84 cents, compared to $2.70. In addition to tax reduction, France agreed, it was understood, to waive temporarily some customs regulations in order to facilitate entry of the fruits.

Mail Order House Will Pay $5.25 Dividend

Chickasha Cotton Oil Votes Special 50-Cent Return for February 15.

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Directors of Montgomery Ward & Co. today voted to pay a dividend of $5.25 a share on the company's Class A stock, representing the total amount accrued prior to January 1, 1933, on that issue. The payment will be made February 12 to stockholders of record January 27.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Chickasha Cotton Oil Co. has declared a special dividend of 50 cents, payable February 15 to stock of record January 30. Three payments of 25 cents each were made last year.

Julius Kayser & Co. today declared a dividend of 25 cents on the common stock, the first disbursement since February 1, 1932, when a similar amount was paid. It is payable February 15 to stock of record February 1.

The Pere Marquette Railway reports net loss of $1,602,077 for 1933 after taxes and charges, against loss of $3,046,668 in 1932.

For December the road had net operating income of $239,329, compared with $180,999 in the same 1932 month.

Business developed by an aggressive newspaper advertising campaign during the last half of 1933 was an important factor in enabling the Missouri-Kansas-Texas system to hold gross revenues within about $1,553,000 of the 1932 figure, M. H. Cahill, president, said today.

This showing, he said, was in spite of heavy general traffic declines and reduced movements of such commodities as wheat, oil and cotton.

Cotton Reacts Slightly Under Liquidation

January Closes at 11.12 as General Market Drops 1 to 11 Points.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Price movements in cotton were nervous and irregular today. Declines were checked by trade buying or covering, but the advance met further liquidation or scattered selling.

The general market closed steady at net declines of 1 to 11 points with the late months relatively easy.

Opening prices were 8 to 13 points lower in response to disappointing Liverpool cables and the decline in foreign exchange rates. In addition to rather active liquidation, there was some selling here through houses with Liverpool and other foreign connections, supposed to be partly on the differences.

Offerings Are Absorbed.

Initial offerings were absorbed by the demand from the trade or shorts, and May advanced from 11.22 to 11.33 and July from 11.38 to 11.48, making rallies of about 10 to 11 points from the lowest.

The bulge met a renewal of liquidation, and some selling which appeared to come partly through houses which recently have been credited with operating for Government agencies.

Some stop orders were uncovered on the decline, which sent May off to 11.18 and July to 11.33, or about 14 to 17 points net lower. These prices seemed to attract an increased demand from spot houses, particularly in the near months, and closing quotations showed rallies of 8 to 13 points from the lowest.

Business in spot cotton was reported less active, although some brokers noted inquiries from Northern and Canadian mills. Exports today, 35,391, making 4,687,760 so far this season. Port receipts, 26,863. United States port stocks, 3,900,861.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was barely steady today with final prices 5 to 10 points net lower. Sales were 2 contracts, but of these 20 were in the way of exchanges from March for July at 35 and 36 points difference. Easier cotton, lard and grain markets were unsettling factors. Bleachable spot, nominal; January closed, 4.55; March, 4.68; May, 4.87; July, 5.08.

British Autos Lose Ground In South Africa

That British automobiles have lost their former strong position in the South African market is revealed in a report from Trade Commissioner E. B. Lawson, Johannesburg, to the Commerce Department.

Figures for car registrations in the Union for the month of October show that British cars accounted for only 16.8 per cent of the total against the ratio for American cars of 81½ per cent. The British figure for October, the report points out, was the lowest recorded for any month since Great Britain abandoned the gold standard.

Concurrent with the change in Great Britain's monetary policy in September, 1931, British car sales began to increase in South Africa and by January, 1933, they accounted for over 41 per cent of all new car sales. The participation of American cars in this market diminished in a corresponding degree and amounted to only 55 per cent of all sales at the beginning of 1933.

The spectacular improvement in gold mining activity, with the resulting betterment in economic conditions, caused the tide to turn in favor of American cars during recent months, the report states.

Three American low-priced automobiles accounted for 70 per cent of all American cars registered in the Union during October and 57.5 per cent of cars of all makes.

Exports of motor vehicles from the United States to South Africa in the eleven months of 1933 ended November 30 had a value of $4,635,834, as compared with a total of $2,260,534 for the full year 1932. Passenger cars account for approximately 80 per cent of this trade.

Natural Gas Still Holding Wide Demand

Product Is Now Used by 7,000,000 Customers; Value, $415,000,000.

Progress of the natural gas industry, the decline of which was freely predicted a quarter of a century ago, is described in Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, publication of the American Chemical Society, by George A. Burrell, of the Burrell-Mase Engineering Co., Pittsburgh.

"Twenty-five years ago about 800,000,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas were consumed per year," says Mr. Burrell. "This compares with a peak production in 1930 of almost 2,000 billion cubic feet, and a value of $415,000,000.

"Manufactured gas for that same year amounted to about 400,000,000,000 cubic feet of a value of $450,000,000. Half of the natural gas is used at the present time for domestic and industrial use, and the other half in the oil fields and for making carbon black.

Natural Gas Customers.

"Natural gas customers now number about 7,000,000. Ohio, New York and Pennsylvania, in the order named, are the largest users of domestic and commercial gas aside from oil field and carbon black uses. Texas produces the most gas, and the largest reserve in that State, the Amarillo, will last for 60 years, it is estimated, at its present rate of production.

"Of particular interest has been the discovery, in recent years, of natural gas from deep strata in northern Pennsylvania and New York fields. The most active fields are in Potter and Tioga Counties, Pa. The known reserve per acre in the Tioga field is something on the order of two to five billion cubic feet, and that in the Potter field probably somewhat more. Rock pressures are as high as 2,250 pounds per square inch, and wells are 4,000 to 5,000 feet deep.

"Thus it is seen that the natural gas industry is not yet a declining one, although this prediction was freely made 25 years ago.

Depth of Wells.

"Wells now can be drilled to a depth of 7,000 feet or more, and the gas is transported a distance of 1,000 miles. In 1930 there were constructed $1,000 miles of trunk lines at a cost of $450,000,000. The total truck line mileage is 60,000, and there are 600,000 horsepower of gas engines of 300 horsepower and over, for compressing the gas in these lines. There are now 56,000 gas wells in the United States.

"The amount of natural gas consumed per year is equal in heating value to about 70,000,000 tons of bituminous coal. The peak production of coal was about 500,000,000 tons per year. Natural gas to the extent of 196,000,000 cubic feet were used in 1931 to make 281,000,000 pounds of carbon black. Of this, about 100,000,000 pounds were exported. Its main use is for auto tire manufacture, although considerable quantities are utilized in pigments, inks, paints and the like.

"About 1.5 billion gallons of natural gasoline are extracted from 1.5 trillion cubic feet of gas each year. This compares with almost no natural gasoline 25 years ago.

"Of the total amount of energy expended in the United States in 1929, aside from manpower, bituminous coal furnished 50 per cent, petroleum 21 per cent, natural gas 7 per cent, and water power, anthracite, wood and other sources the remainder."

Wool Goods Market Quiet; Prices Steady

New York, Jan. 18.—Wool goods business was rather slow this past week, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. Retailers appeared to be too absorbed in special promotions of winter apparel to pay much attention to spring requirements, and clothing manufacturers were disposed to use what goods they had on hand rather than enter the market for supplies.

Women's wear sales are reported to be improving, however. Substantial business has been done on tweeds, and a number of firms are in receipt of orders for winter resort wear. Some sections of the trade are quiet, but the wool section, which is meeting current demand with attractively priced fabrics, is doing a brisk business.

"Mills held prices firm last week," says the Exchange Service. "Many sales agents are of the opinion that a sustained quiet period will eliminate weak holders of fabrics and clear the way for improved business at strong prices in about three weeks' time.

"The belief is general that the year-end confusion arising as a result of heavy inventories, filing of financial statements, granting of credit lines, and so forth, is about over, and that the market is grooming itself for a burst of buying activity early next month. The strength displayed by raw and semimanufactured materials markets is a source of encouragement to producers of wool goods, who find their efforts to hold prices supported by raw wool and yarn dealers.

Mills are fairly busy on orders booked weeks ago. Reports from manufacturing centers state that some plants are slackening operations while others are stepping up production. Most sales agents look for a pickup soon and predict an increase in manufacturing activity after February 1."

Better Demand Seen.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Dun & Bradstreet's weekly review says that "the demand for high priced goods, with quality the price consideration, has attained a force unequaled since 1929." The review said that purchase of wearing apparel in New York wholesale marts was above this time last year.

Two Radio Police Are Found Guilty

Face Loss of Leave for Not Answering Call.

Two Sixth Precinct policemen face the loss of two days' annual leave under recommendations of the Police Trial Board yesterday. They were found guilty of failing to receive and respond to a radio call.

It was charged the officers, John Boyd and Raymond D. Padgett, failed to receive a call after it was twice repeated on December 17. The officers contended they were in a noisy section of the city and did not hear the first call. They were absolved of blame in the first instance, but found guilty of failing to respond to the repeated message.

Boyd was cleared on additional charges of intoxication and disobedience of orders.

Radio Waves and Ripples

RCA is about ready to put into commercial operation two of the latest developments in radio communication.

The first is multiplex transmission which makes possible simultaneous sending of three different radiograms on one wavelength. Those ingenious technical men have discovered an arrangement of commutators by means of which three distinct sets of Morse signals may be transmitted at once and separated into three radiograms at the receiving station. Each channel has a capacity of 60 words a minute, making the total wavelength capacity 180 words.

The second development has to do with the transmission of pictures and is even more technical and difficult to understand than the first and probably a lot more important. At any rate, David Sarnoff, RCA president, seems confident his company will be able to send photograms at a higher speed and lower cost than now possible with the dot and dash system of the Morse code.

TO occupy the minutes between Mrs. Roosevelt's address and the time the National Conference on the Cause and Cure of War was to go on the air through WMAL Wednesday night, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, conference chairman, told stories.

She ran through her repertoire and there were several minutes left during which, unless some one did something about it the dinner guests probably would have sat staring at one another. So the resourceful Mrs. Catt turned brightly to WMAL Announcer Carlton Smith and said:

"Why don't you tell a story, too, Mr. Smith?"

Whereupon Mr. Smith related the tale of the three little pigs, which is not the sort of story one would tell a Sunday School class, but which is probably all right for conferences on the cause and cure of war because the ladies laughed like everything.

Further rebroadcasting of police calls by WJSV is up to Police Chief Brown. The Columbia station is ready to continue since a majority of listeners seem to favor interruption of their Saturday night dance programs with exciting little items about the Police Department.

Maj. Brown should be favorably impressed if shown a letter from one listener for whom the police rebroadcasts have been a broadening experience. Somehow, he said, he had got the idea that traffic was about the only problem a policeman has.

WJSV feels more or less responsible for Columbia's signing a sponsor for "Forty-five Minutes in Hollywood," a radio movie preview show to start January 27, for it was the local station that first put the advertiser on the air, demonstrating a radio's possibilities.

When President Roosevelt addresses the Nation's Boy Scouts from the White House February 10, lines and public address equipment installed by WJSV will carry his message to 3,000 Capital Scouts in Washington Auditorium.

In case anyone has been wondering what has happened to Mrs. Pennyfeather of the Cuckoo Hour, it is understood she has been up in New York these last few weeks helping RKO make a picture to be called "What Will You Play?" She takes the part of the Congressman's wife and is supposed to be a wow.

She's back in Washington now, seeing that her sick husband out in Walter Reed Hospital is getting the attention he needs. Until the middle of March her network programs, Morning Parade and the Cuckoo Hour, will go on from Washington.

The first broadcast from Milan's famed La Scala Opera-house will be sent to this country by Columbia short wave January 25. For 45 minutes, American listeners will hear Donizetti's "La Favorita" presented from the same stage on which 90 per cent of the opera stars won fame, and where Toscanini conducted for 30 years.

National is bringing the world premiere of Franz Lehar's new operetta "Guiditta" from Vienna to America by short wave at 1 p. m. tomorrow. Lehar will be remembered, we hope, as the author of the "Merry Widow," "The Count of Luxenberg" and "The Love Call."

The broadcast will be cut short for the Metropolitans presentation of "Don Giovanni" with Rosa Ponselle, Ezio Pinza, Emanuel List and Tito Schipa, at 1:55.

New on the Air.

JOHN SLAUGHTER
is the latest Capital bandman to go radio. His "Fireside Fantasy" is a regular Tuesday night feature on WRC.

Pleasing Tenor

CLARENCE ALBRIGHT
sings tenor with pleasing effect now and then from WOL. One of these days his bosses will put him on the G. B. S. network. He will be available tomorrow at 6:45 p. m.

Launching Date Set For Destroyer Hull

First of Ships in Program of 1931 Ready Jan. 31.

A descendant of the brother of Isaac Hull, sea hero of the War of 1812, will be sponsor for the destroyer Hull, third naval vessel to be named in the commodore's memory, at the ship's launching at the New York Navy Yard, January 31.

Patricia Louise Platt, of New York, was designated for this function by the Navy Department yesterday.

The Hull will be the first of the new destroyers authorized by Congress in 1931 to be launched. Launching of the Farragut, under construction by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co., has been postponed until February 14.

The Hull is 334 feet long with an extreme beam of 34 feet 3 inches, and a displacement of 1,500 tons.

Labor Will Honor President Jan. 30

Grand Concert Planned by Organizations.

Led by the Washington Central Labor Union, organized labor of the District will honor President Roosevelt on his birthday, January 30, with a President's birthday concert in the auditorium of the new McKinley High School.

The labor organizations also are supporting the President's birthday ball at the Shoreham Hotel the same night, the proceeds of which will go to an endowment for the Warm Springs, Ga., Foundation.

John B. Colpoys, editor of the Trades Unionist, is chairman of the grand concert committee. Other committee members include Richard A. Dickson, John Locher, F. W. Lee and F. S. Walker.

Nearly a hundred local labor bodies, representing all crafts and Government employes, are cooperating. Proceeds of the grand concert also will go to the Warm Springs Foundation.

Near East Excavations Lecture Topic Tonight

The work of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago in uncovering the story of man's development in the Near East will be described to members of the National Geographic Society this evening at 8:15 o'clock, at Constitution Hall, by Charles Breasted, executive secretary of the institute.

Mr. Breasted last year flew over most of the institute's archeological projects in the Near East, as far as Shiraz and Persepolis, Persia. His talk will be illustrated by motion pictures and slides.

Lecture Next Thursday On Yellowstone Bears

The antics and private lives of the world's only popular "chiselers," the Yellowstone bears, will be the topic of an illustrated lecture by Joseph Joffe, assistant to the superintendent of Yellowstone National Park, next Thursday evening in the Interior Department auditorium.

Walt Mason Himself

The Tough Job.

The President sits, sighing, upon his White House chair; and if he feels like crying, and if he rends his hair, what delegate can blame him, or say there's no excuse? Conditions try to frame him, they strive to cook his goose. The problems come before him, a new batch every hour; they come to vex and bore him, they come to test his power; six problems are adjusted, and seven more arise; "The country's going busted," exclaim the frantic guys. Nine problems nicely settled, and nineteen more appear; that man is highly mettled who does not shed a tear. That man is superhuman who thinks his job is fun, when every man and woman brings problems by the ton; when every grouchy caller brings problems to his desk, brings problems large or smaller, brings problems picturesque. Oh, problems are his diet, the order of the day; there is an endless riot of problems grave and gay. And when he finds solution for two or three or four, he hears some elocution about three dozen more. The President sits grieving, and thinks, in his despair, of when he will be leaving the blamed old White House chair; he pictures, in his dreaming, some hollow in the ground, where statesmen are not scheming and problems are not found.

BRASSIERES follow the MEDIEVAL trend

With a Back-to-Nature Movement

Every girl knows that the duty of a brassiere is to support and not conceal the bust . . . and here's one that does just that. Satin supporting sections joined to elastic shoulder straps outline the breastline . . . giving a natural, beautiful line beneath your frocks. The young miss . . . the small woman . . . the girl at school and college needs just this sort of "bra" for comfortable support.

4,000 Scouts to Mobilize.

Four thousand Scouts will gather Saturday, February 10, to participate in a council-wide good turn mobilization, according to Commodore W. E. Longfellow, chairman of the committee on arrangements.

From now till February 10, all Troops, Cub Packs and Sea Scout Units are asked to collect used clothing to be distributed to the needy through Community Chest agencies, and accumulate it in boy sized bundles at the troop headquarters. If no clothing can be secured, nonperishable foodstuffs may be collected.

The clothing should be wrapped in brown paper bundles about the size of a Scout pack and the troop and division number painted on the outside for identification. Pack straps or shoulder loops of clothesline or ¼-inch rope should be used so the bundles can be carried packwise by each boy.

The night of Friday, February 9, will be devoted to completing the packs and perfecting details of the mobilization for Saturday. Get in all possible associate and former Scouts for this big Good Turn Rally. Trucks will be at the mobilization point of each divisional group. At 9 a. m. Washington should be seething with the activities of 4,000 Scouts and their leaders and by 10 a. m. at four centers the entire mobile strength of the council should be ready to move on the point of mobilization, Washington Auditorium. None should appear at the Auditorium except council members, Service Units of Associate Scouts, Sea Scouts (ushers and guides) and other specially designated groups.

At 11 a. m. the four special units headed by their bands will move on the point of mobilization in column of twos headed by divisional flags and one National flag for each troop. The troops will be marked by their troop flags and headed by their scoutmaster or assistant scoutmaster. The commissioner will head his division with his orderly and bugler. The truck for clothing will be at the rear of the units.

At 11:45 the program will start and the doors will be closed until after the President's message has been received. A short program will be conducted in the auditorium and all formations are to be kept intact until the final dismissal.
